Good Opinion of the Regular Turkish Army.

BELGRADE, Sept. 11.—There is little change in the Servian campaign. Tchernayeff's prospects are brighter than they were a week ago. The Turks evidently wish to pass Alexinats and take Deligrade by a flank movement, but that purpose has been checked by the advance of Horvatovitch, and it is clear they will still have to fight a decisive battle. There are no signs of the warlike spirit abating in Servia.

A special despatch from Belgrade to the Times says.—Before the publication of order rendering soldiers mutilating themselves liable to the penalty of death or imprisonment for life many Servians had already been executed for that offence. On one occasion as many as 40 in a batch were executed. I have been told that there are hospitals in which more than half the patients are of this class. Though the accounts of some of the Turkish outrages are unhappily but too well established to be doubted, a fair idea of the proceedings of the Turkish force is not to be gathered from the fearful tales so carefully collected. An English gentleman who passed through the Servian district lately visited by the Turks reports that he had many opportunities of talking with the people whose homes had been altogether in the hands of the enemy, and he met with not a single case of gross outrage.
