OTTAWA, WEDNESDAY, DEC 20, 1876 Late last night the Hon. JAMES SKEAL received a telegram from Quebec, in which he was informed that the "Rafts men's Bill" had been withdrawn from before the Legislature. The object of this due. This proceeding on the part of the promoters of the Bill was of a vexatious nature, and if successful would have placed power in the hands of men who are sometimes inconsiderate and mischievon the Ottawa River, as on the other "lumbering streams," we have no doubt are considerate and kindly in the treatment of their men, and are always willing and ready to do the handsome by them. that raftsmen may occasionally have had differently situated to other classes of special legislation to protect them. Heretofore it has been matter of general complaint that Canada was not sufficiently well-understood by the people of England, that her resources were not appreciated shown to those negroes who desired to at their true value, and that she was ignored and neglected. There was a natural and loyal yearning for more sympathy and recognition. But just now, when there is the dawn of the appreciation which Canadians have justly laid claim to for this country, Mr. Speaker Eddy was held in Hull, which was very India and the colonies. We have reason cept the compromise, the latter gentle-Anglin comes down flat-footed, and in his irritable and peevish way talks about " parvenus" and "disgust."
