PHOSPHORUS:

cludes many valuable remedies for human afflictions, it is a matter of certainty that in all cases where the animal vitality is failing, phosphorus is decidedly superior to every other remedy at present known. It will work effects such as nothing else will produce, and it possesses the great advantage of not causing, when its use is relinquished, the slightest action or depression.

The Cornhill Magazine of April, 1861, says:—
"But of all the inorganic elements, none "But of all the inorganic elements, none seem to exhibit so striking an adaptation to become a constituent of the organic body as Phosphorus. Here, then is an element, which can imperceptibly and quickly pass from a condition of great chemical activity to one of great chemical inertness. In virtue of this character Phosphorus may follow the blood in its changes, may oxidise in one great set of capillaries, and be indifferent to oxygen in the other; may occur in the brain in the in the other; may occur in the brain in tellect or imagination demands, and literally flaming that thoughts may breathe and words may burn, and may be present in the bones in its amorphous form, content, like an impas-sive caryatid, to sustain upon its unwearled Sure connection with Grand Trunk Trains

Sive caryatid, to sustain upon its unwearied shoulders the mere dead weight of stones of flesh—and what is here said of the brain, as contrasted with the bones, will apply with equal or similar force to many other organs of the body. All throughout the living sysem, we may believe that Phosphorus is found the centres of vital action in the active ondition, and at its outlying points in the assive condition."

Dr. Rowbotham says it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that Phosphorus in a free, unoxidated state is an essential element of activity in the rrain and nervous system of animals; it is equally difficult to resist the conviction of the great importance of Phospherous as an element of the Materia Medica.

The question naturally presents itself, "Why is so valuable an element so little regarded and so seldom prescribed?" The enly answer which can be given is:—that a certain difficulty has been found in so preparing it that its action may be kept under perfect control. Hitherto it has been used in almond and olive oils, in Sulphuric Ether, in rectified Alcohol, in Chloroform, and in several other substances; but however valuable it has been found in all the hitherto known methods of its preparation, certain irregular results have been experienced, which have led physicians to neglect it for general purposes, and to employ it only in safreme cases. But a chemical process has now been discovered, by which its invaluable action on the human system may be realised without any of those drawbacks which previous modes of administration have invariably produced. imals; it is equally difficult to resist the con-
