A German paper points out the striking similarity between the assurances of the Russian Government in the present crisis and those it gave 110 years ago, at the very time when negotiating secretly with Prussia for the partition of Poland. Empress Catherine then declared as Czar Alerander does now, that sae was only asking guarantees, because she was 'anxious "for the maintenance of peace," adding: "I will never make any claim to the territory of Poland. I will even secure its integrity should any other Power attack !" Soon after the Russians entered Poland, the Czarine declared it was only for the purpose of preventing disturbances which might be caused by concessions to malcontent. The spoliation and partition followed nevertheless.

The late Lord Lonsdale was a master of fox hounds. He was going one morning by train to the meet at his park, and "happened upon" two lively young gentlemen in the same carriage. The two young gentlemen had not a high opinion of the park, and a still worse one of the country. They debated upon the chance of finding any fox that day, and finally appealed to Lord Lonsdale himself, who was listening to their conversation. "Gentlemen," he said, "I am sure you will find a fox." "Sure?" said they, smiling at each other, as they glanced at extensive the dried-up, prim old gentleman, "You can't be sure." "Yes, I can," he replied calmly, "for I am the master of the hounds." At the same time he drew a ham per from beneath the seat, half raised the lid, and disclosed a fine large fox, saying, " and here he is.

PHOSPHORUS:

MEDICINE

The Cornhill Magazine of April, 1861, says:—
"But of all the inorganic elements, none seem to exhibit so striking an adaptation to become a constituent of the organic body as Phosphorus. Here, then is an element, which can imperceptibly and quickly pass from a condition of great chemical activity to one of great chemical inertness. In virtue of this character Phosphorus may follow the blood in its character way oxidise in one great blood in its changes, may oxidise in one great set of capillaries, and be indifferent to oxygen in the other; may occur in the brain in the in the other; may occur in the brain in the vitreous form, changing as quickly as the intellect or imagination demands, and literally fiaming that thoughts may breathe and words may burn, and may be present in the bones in its amorphous form, content, like an impassive caryatid, to sustain upon its sinwearied shoulders the mere dead weight of stones of fiesh—and what is here said of the brain, as contrasted with the bones, will apply with t the centres of vital action in the active ondition, and at its outlying points in the in the conclusion that Phosphorus in a free, unoxidated state is an essential element of activity in the crain and nervous system of animals; it is equally difficult to resist the conviction of the great importance of Phosphorocal an element of the Materis Medica.

The question naturally presents itself, "Why is so valuable an element so little regarded and so seldom prescribed?" The enly answer which can be given is:—that a certain difficulty has been found in so preparing it that its action may be kept under perfect control. Hitherto it has been used in almond and olive oils, in Sulphuric Ether, in rectified Alcohol, in Chloroform, and in several other substances; but however valuable it has been found in all the hitherto known methods of its preparation, certain irregular results have been experienced, which have led physicians to neglect it for general purposes, and to employ it only in extreme cases. But a chemical process has now been discovered, by which its invaluable action on the human system may be realised without any of those drawbacks which previous modes of administration have invariably produced. I Dr. Rowbotham says it is difficult to avoid
