

Board of education to institute energy saving measures

The Simcoe Board of Education has instituted a number of energy conservation measures, following the recommendations of the board's energy management committee.

In its report to the board tabled at a regular meeting last week, the committee noted that it had discussed a lengthy list of energy conservation proposals. The committee recommended several measures for the board's consideration. The board agreed that the proposals were sound and authorized the administration to implement the measures. The temperature settings in teaching and office areas will be adjusted to approximately 68 degrees Fahrenheit. Air-conditioning systems will be adjusted to maintain an average temperature of 78 degrees in all teaching and office areas.

In non-teaching areas such as storage rooms, a temperature of 55 degrees will be maintained during the heating season.

Unused buildings, or portions of buildings will be heated only enough to prevent freezing. Devices used to hold open exterior doors will be removed and personal automobile block heaters must not be plugged into Board electrical services.

Board sets school year schedule

The Simcoe County Board of Education has ruled the school year should exist of 185 instructional days and the remaining 11 be used as professional activity days.

Board philosophy, it was suggested it is essential that time be available for teachers at all levels to meet and discuss programs.

The first two days in the school year will be used for individual schools to review the program begun in September and to hold subject council meetings. The meetings will provide an opportunity for all teachers in the county, teaching a particular subject, to meet together and discuss programs offered.

The essential activities required of teachers and principals necessitates time being available if the school program is to proceed without interruption in September.

Browndale agreement renewed

The Simcoe County Board of Education has approved an existing agreement with Browndale School in Midland and agreed to the addition of one teacher to the staff.

The agreement provides that the school be reimbursed by the Ministry of Education for the teacher's salaries, the classroom supplies and the furniture and equipment required for each classroom.

At the present time, Browndale School in Midland has three teachers. There are 27 students enrolled at the school.

"Future Unlimited" banquet

Top achievers named

Brent Graham was named top achiever and Doug Vincent selected top junior executive at the second annual Junior Achievement awards banquet "Future Unlimited" held last week at the Country Mill. Graham, a member of the J.A. Woodler company sponsored by Motorola and Vincent, a member of the Trayco company team sponsored by Kindred Industries, were presented with plaques in recognition of their efforts and achievements. Seven Junior Achievement participants - Lorie Hoffman, Michael Lediard, Terry Lynn Dusome, Brent Graham, Laurel Massey, Katherine Grosvenor and Janet Howard - were awarded achiever pins. Junior executive award pins were handed to Frank Ehmcke, Doug Vincent, Laurie Asselin, Heidi Lipp, Doug Snider, Claire Cox, Keith Robertson, and Denise St. Amand.

Junior achievers learn the hard business realities first hand from the relationship between the purchasing department and general production, to problems of balancing the books, and balancing the forces at work in a business.

The Midland and Penetanguishene junior achievers worked out of three sponsoring industrial plants. J.A. Woodler Enterprises and its workers made wooden candleholders under president Doug Snider, using Motorola's premises one night a week over the winter. At RCA, Veltrac employees met once a week to produce string art wall plaques. Tom Charlebois was Veltrac president. Trayco president Tom Charlebois and his team worked from the Kindred Industries plant producing stainless steel trays.

Sponsoring companies in JA communities agree to pay the bill for the annual banquet and they come up with the funds for training manuals and foot the cost of sending achievers to conferences and workshops.

This year Laurie Asselin of J.A. Woodler company and Katherine Grosvenor of Veltrac Enterprises were named delegates to the Canadian Junior Achievement conference in Toronto later this year.

Board of directors president Bernard Brumley informed the meeting that Bausch & Lomb had agreed to become a fourth sponsoring company in the next year.

For 1976-77, Bill Moss will serve as president, succeeding Brumley. Herb De Jong will remain as the board's vice-president; Jim Townsend will act as board secretary; and Mel Hepler will remain the board's treasurer.
