Horticultural Society gives Midland a floral facelift

Many of Midland's public areas have had a floral facelift thanks to the members of the Midland Horticultural Society. Last weekend, a dozen junior and senior members toted peat moss, top soil, vermiculite and fertilizer to several spots. Geraniums, salvia, petunias and marigolds transformed them into beauty spots. The town dock area has been replanted, after many years of neglect. In addition, eight planters have been placed on Dominion Avenue and 16 new planters have been placed at the town's four main intersections. The old hanging planters which used to decorate King Street are slated to be hung at the dock.

The post Office and PUC buildings were also groomed

Flower beds at the Post Office and the PUC building were also planted this weekend.

The Bayshore lookout area will soon be graced with three picnic tables, and a flower bed.

So, while the weekend rain may have unsettled some local residents, it was a boon for the hard working horticulturalists. "The rain, we're glad to say, has settled everything in very nicely," said president Madelaine Hobson.
