Election upcoming

Assessing Coldwater village council

by E. Lorraine Orr
With Municipal election time fast approaching, concerned citizens are beginning to wonder just what Coldwater's present council has done and if they should be re-elected.

Coldwater's Ken Athron served on council for the first time this past term. He was inexperienced at the beginning but has learned many things regarding the governing of the village in his two years in office.

Each councilman is expected to serve as a working chairman of one committee and as a committee member with several other groups. A councilman receives $600 per annum for serving on Council, and an additional $25 per meeting. However, the individual meeting fee is paid only when there are enough members present to form a quorum.

Ken's responsibility has been the maintenance of roads. This entailed the supervision of snow plowing and sanding in winter and repairs during the summer. During his term all village roads have been resurfaced with asphalt. It was council's intention to repair sidewalks in the village in co-operation and financing from the Ministry of Transportation and Communications. Unfortunately before the work could be done the Ministry had a reduction in its budget and were unable to finance the improvements. It is hoped that money will be available in 1977 to do the much needed repairs.

At the time of Councilman Cyril Martin's resignation and the appointment of Barbara Tyrell to replace him, it was necessary for Ken to assume the duties of Water Commissioner in addition to his regular work. Ken also serves as council representative on the Community Centre Board.

Mr. Athron suggested that anyone having a problem or complaint should telephone the village office and advise the clerk. Then, if possible, send a follow-up letter. In this way the Council has a record on file and can give the problem the proper attention. It is not always possible for the Councilmen to recall all the particulars of a situation if approached on the street.

When asked by this reporter if he is considering running for re-election, he said "I do not like to leave a job unfinished, particularly at this time of rezoning and possible annexation. I will consider running again if the other candidates will put the interest of the Village before their own personal feelings and gains".

Coldwater art show and sale a success

by E. Lorraine Orr
Coldwater can now boast of its own Art Show. Dave Parker who lives on the Borland farm just south of Coldwater, and new Coldwater resident Jim Williams, met through mutual friend Bill Tillie. Their interest in oil painting inspired them to present an art exhibition and sale in Coldwater on the Labor Day weekend. Their colorful works of art attracted many people to the Senior Citizens' Riverside Club.

catching picture by Mr. Williams was a field of flowers. The large flowers were made of pop bottle caps with centres of upholstery tacks. The smaller flowers were made from mirror rosettes and mapping pins. The stems were painted in oil with a large sun shining down overhead. The gentlemen hope the interest of the public will warrant making the affair an annual event.

Sympathy

Among Mr. Parker's exhibits was an oil painting of Eplet's Mill, always an interesting subject for artists. Also included in his display were oil paintings of the original outbuildings on the Borland farm shown in the different seasons. An unusual and eye-

The villagers were saddened to learn of the sudden death of Ken Ferguson of Main Street South. Sympathy is extended to his sisters, Mrs. Zoia Dunlop of Coldwater and Mrs. Merle Haskell of Bracebridge.
