Gift Ideas... Tips on Getting Ready for the Holidays... and Helpful Hints!

What to Do with Turkey Leftovers:

"Turkey AGAIN? Mom, can we go to McDonald's?"

Holiday cooking brings with it the inevitable - holiday leftovers, and kids seem to have less tolerance than the rest of us for the re-eating of birds and trimmings. Unless you are particularly creative in the use of holiday leftovers, subsequent meals can become a drag, and the rest of the family may rebel against you as well. Here are some ideas on how to disguise and adapt your leftovers to make them more palatable:

- Use stuffing to make main dish pie shells by pressing and compacting it against a pie plate. Then fill the shell with leftover turkey and vegetables. You can also use stuffing to stretch hamburger and meat loaf.
- Cranberry sauce makes a great base for meat glaze, fruit salad dressing or ice cream topping. Re-use mashed potatoes for potato yeast bread, muffins or rolls.
- When it comes to the turkey, you can soup it, sandwich it, grind it or salad it. Use white meat for pies, chopped light and dark bits for salads, light and dark strips for turkey stew.

• Simmer the turkey carcass and you have a broth that makes a great base for other soups. Or just add noodles or rice and seasonings.

• Add leftover turkey to potato salad or Waldorf salad and you can eat it as a main dish, or substitute turkey for beef and serve it as stroganoff or use turkey instead of chicken and eat it a la king.

Make a turkey hash or turkey pizza, grind up turkey and make it into patties or paté, use it in scrapple or curry. The possibilities go on and on...!

NEW PINBALL MACHINE, the first ever designed and priced for home use, provides everything the familiar commercial models do - flippers, automatic scoring, lights, bells and thumper bumpers. Called Cosmic Pinball, it's available at larger Sears stores and through the company's Christmas catalog.

Newest Adult Home Game Provides Good News for Pinball Wizards

There will be some new and different flashing lights and ringing bells in many homes on Christmas morning this year. But they won't be the kind that are usually associated with the holiday season. The lights and bells (along with some thumps) will be the sights and sounds of one of America's very favorite games - the pinball machine.

Up until now, the chances of obtaining such a game were extremely slim. A pinball enthusiast had to be fortunate enough to know someone in the arcade or vending business or spend a lot of time digging around flea markets to get his own machine. And, new machines or those in good working order were exremely expensive. Although somewhat smaller and with a wood-grain cabinet to fit home decors, Cosmic Pinball has everything the commercial models do... except a coin slot. Along with the flashing lights and bells, there are thumper bumpers, flippers and an automatic scoreboard on the illuminated back panel. The new three-ball game has electro-mechanical circuitry, operates on normal household current and comes with a 6-foot cord with on/off switch.

Priced at about $300, Cosmic Pinball is available at larger Sears stores and through the company's 1976 Christmas catalog.
