A gift for a Queen

Winterama Queen Marie Moreau was presented with a number of prizes after her victory. Glen Bryant, vice-president of the Chamber of Commerce, and owner of Bryant's Jewellers, presented Marie with a Bulova watch. The Queen also received a hand-woven scarf from the Huronia Crafts Guild, and a full dinner courtesy of the Watergate restaurant in Penetanguishene, along with numerous other gifts.

Saturday's parade

The Winterama parade, held on Saturday afternoon, attracted thousands of people to Penetanguishene. Advanced Extrusions won the prize for the best float in the parade. The parade also featured other floats built by local business and industry, and even a mule entered by the Huronia Crafts Guild. Of course, the fire trucks were in the parade also.

Crafts demonstrations

A number of crafts-people set up shop at the High Poyntz Mall during the Winterama festivities. Among the various displays and demonstrations were painting, pottery, weaving, and spinning.

Jingle bells in February

Winterama wouldn't be complete without the traditional sleigh-rides. This team of horses and their driver delighted children and adults with tours of Penetanguishene Harbour.

High speed action

The excitement of go-kart racing was evident in the faces of these youngsters as they putted around a small track on the harbour.

For the adventurous

For those with a taste for action, motorcycle ice racing provided fast paced excitement during Winterama. The bikers raced around a ploughed section of Penetanguishene Harbour on Saturday and Sunday, the sounds of their bikes mixing with the sound of snowmobiles, a helicopter, radio-powered aeroplanes and music coming from CKMP.

Br-r-r-r

The water may have been ice cold, but that didn't stop this group of divers from demonstrating their hobby to fascinated Winterama patrons.
