Little bit of Greece

The Martyrs' Shrine is a popular destination for Catholics throughout the summer months, both families and groups. Recently two buses brought members of the Saints Constantine and Helen chapters of the Greek Ladies' Philanthropic Association of Toronto to the shrine. Before returning to Toronto the women visited Midland's Athenian Hall. Some of the ladies stand before a mural with a Greek scene in the hall's basement.

Working at town hall gives students new insight

by Murray Moore
Two students are working for the summer under staff at Midland's town hall thanks to provincial grants. Robert Lalonde and Douglas Rowley were interviewed recently.

He's learned quite a bit. "I didn't know all what went on in this building." He has sat in on a planning meeting and a council meeting. After high school he plans to take planning and architectural courses at either Queen's University or the University of Waterloo.

Robert Lalonde, a Penetanguishene resident, took business administration at Seneca College. He is administrative assistant to the clerk and deputy-clerk. He has helped organize events for the recent visit of the Governor-General, done research into files, insurance policies, and municipal transactions, and will become advisor for the Community Appreciation Program between the time that deputy-clerk David Farquhar leaves and his replacement arrives.

Lalonde will attend Lakehead University this fall in pursuit of a degree in business administration. His experience this summer is influencing him to think of a future with a municipality as well as with a corporation.

Douglas Rowley, a Midland resident, will enter Grade 13 at MSS this fall. He is a draftsman in the town's planning department for the summer, working under the town's planner, Bryan McKell.

A big job is the drawing of a base map to scale of Midland, for distribution to all the town's offices, showing the zoning.

He also does a lot of odd jobs, and works on plans.
