Congratulations are extended to the Cold-water Fair Board for their excellent fair held last week.

Not only were the exhibits of prime quality but the quantity was astonishing...The Womens Institute exhibits were very attractive and numerous. The needlework section was full of all kinds of handwork beautifully done. The school exhibits had 1500 entries.

The heaviest squash was 94 lbs., entered by Pam Bursey of Moonstone while the heaviest pumpkin weighing 46 lbs. was entered by Andy Brown of Warminster.

The amount of baking displayed was tremendous both in number of entries and in quality. The commercial exhibits added both interest and colour and represented a great deal of work and time on the part of the exhibitors.

The Womens Institute Booth in honour of the "Salute to the Institute in Ontario" was very attractive. Not only did it have exhibits but demonstrations of crocheting by Evelyn Robertson and muffin making by Home Economist of Elmvalle. The Fair was capably opened this year by Mrs. Clarence Diamond of New Hamburg the Provincial President of the Institute.

Recognition and thanks must also be given to the young teenagers who helped set up the tables for exhibits among many other things, as well as to the Public School pupils who with garbage bag in hand cleaned the entire Fair grounds of litter.

Altogether it produced a very successful fair. Good team work.

On a travel tour there are always interesting experiences that we like to share with out friends. From a tour of Eastern Europe my thoughts centre on walls.

From the early records we have learned that cities of that time built walls around the city proper. Farm lands would usually be outside but the homes would be inside. If the inhabitants wish to build a dwelling outside of the city walls and set up some type of enterprise that was their decision and their risk. If the enemy should come after nightfall they would be at his mercy.

The walls were for protection from enemies to keep the adversary out. They were very high and very strongly built with lookout towers from which guards kept constant vigil. The old city of Quebec had a similar wall in our own country.

The forts of the early settlers on our continent had the same idea "Keep the enemy out". The forts and walled cities were of limited size protecting an area varying from half an acre with walls 100 feet long and 15 feet high wade of upright poles sharpened like huge lead pencils, to cities enclosed by walls 2 1/2 miles long and 60 feet high, made of mud, brick and stone, with inner walls for additional defence.

Now in our modern age the Great Wall of China, started in B.C. period of mud, stone and brick, still stands as a memorial of what China built to keep the barbarians out. In Europe complete walls, portion of walls, and city gates are to be seen everywhere built hundreds of years ago for protection.

But in this present age we also have a formidable wall that extends 856 miles to enclose Eastern Germany, built not to keep enemies out but to keep its citizens in. Instead of the inner walls of the old walled cities, it has inner protections of deep ditches, to deter movement of any motorized vehicles and barbed wirefences, complete with fragmentary bombs at head, chest and knee level, that can be triggered automatically by trip wires or detonated from nearby guard towers. A cleared area of almost half a mile is regularly raked to show any footmarks.

About 1 mile inside the border is a second fence similarly equipped with detection devices. The watch towers are built within sight of each other with guns pointing eastward. The wire fence is anchored 3 feet underground to prevent tunnelling.

In Berlin itself, this fence becomes a true cement wall about 9 ft. high with strands of electrified wire on the top. East Germans had been moving from East Germany to West Germany at the rate of 200,000 per year. In 1962, when the Berlin Wall was erected, this number was reduced to approximately 5,700 and so far this year there have been only 147 escapes. A substantial elevated wooden platform has been constructed in West Berlin very close to the wall from which anyone can look over the wall into the cleared area of no mans land of the central section where tank traps bristle but no life stirs. A phone call from East to West Berlin may take as long as eight hours to receive. Death notifications of close friends or relatives are never received until long after the funeral has taken place.

Once you have seen this wall and realize what it means to so many people you can never forget it.
