The front lawn of the Post Office was renovated last week when weeds and old grass were removed from the hedge and along the fence, and a new garden was made between the uprights of the sign.

A path was gravelled where the grass had been worn away by persons short-cutting across it. This was another Civic Improvement Project of the Coldwater Horticultural Society.

Two local boys were hired to do the work, namely, Jamie Scott and Abby Turner.

It is the intention of the members of the society to plant bulbs in the new garden now, and bedding plants in the spring.

Our little village is certainly starting to take shape as road construction through the village nears a grateful end. With the addition of curbs, storm run-off troughs and sidewalks the "main drag" is looking pretty good.

And at this time of year entering the village is a colourful experience whether entered from the north or the south. It is no exaggeration that when all road work is complete with nice new, smooth pavement, Wyebridge will undoubtedly sigh a huge sigh of relief.

While we are thinking about how lucky we are to live in such a beautiful village let's not forget some of the activities that take place.

With less than one week to go until Blighty Bingo opens its doors final preparations are being made to make opening night Tuesday, Oct. 21, a smashing success. Doors will open at 6:30 p.m. for the sale of cards and the first game is 8 p.m.

Verna McClung and Gladys Reed were the hostesses recently as the Wyebridge Women's Institute held their October meeting.

In attendance were 21

members accompanied by three visitors.

When the roll call was performed, those present were asked to explain their favourite hobby and to exhibit a sample where possible.

June Laurin impressed the members with a ceramics demonstration. June also brought along a beautiful collection of some finished products.

Eileen Curry and Lorna Dorion each gave a report on the District Directors meeting they attended recently.

They reported that the National Women's Institute are planning to offer calendars to the general public at $1.50 each along with placemats at a cost of $4 per hundred.

The Firemen's Dance will take place at 9 p.m., Oct. 25. Wayne Turner and the Northern Edition will supply the music. Tickets are $10 per couple, and a buffet lunch and door prizes will also be offered.

My brother-in-law, Jim Withers enjoyed a three day visit here last week. Jim really noticed a change in his old home town with all the construction that has taken place over the past several months.

The First Wyebridge Cubs will be holding their meeting tomorrow evening in the form of a campfire. Assistant District Commissioner, Joyce Philips will be in attendance and will no doubt lead the boys in their camp-fire sing-songs.

The people of Wyebridge at this time extend deepest sympathies to Lila Eakley and family. A few weeks ago her sister, Jessie (Jay) Armstrong passed away. Mrs. Armstrong, of St. Catharines, died September 28, after a long struggle with cancer and was buried Oct. 1 at 2 p.m. at the Halse and English Funeral Home in St. Catharines.

Mrs. Armstrong is survived by her husband, Bruce, sons Robert and Donald and three grandchildren.
