Elmvalle woman 'Parent of the Year'

An Elmvalle woman has been selected "Parent of the Year" by the Barrie chapter of Parents Without Partners, an honour awarded annually to the most deserving single parent of the area.

Joyce Currie, an Elmvalle mother of two, is this year's recipient of the award after judging took place recently in Barrie.

Mrs Currie was chosen from among the 160 members of Parents Without Partners and received a commemorative plaque, a bouquet of roses, and an engraved tray to herald the judges' choice.

Three judges unknown to the trio of candidates up for the award, interviewed each and made their decision. Mrs. Currie was nominated by club president Donna Raven and subsequently received the award.

Joyce has been a member of the Barrie chapter of PWP since its inception in 1971 and has been a single parent for 12 years. In that time she raised two boys, Donald aged 22 and Glen aged 17.

Her hobbies include a good deal of volunteer work with the CNIB, PWP, her church and a crisis centre.

She is an avid piano player, enjoys sewing and quilting and likes to work with people.

At present she is a member of the grievance and ethics committee with the club and admits that she has been a much happier parent since joining the international organization.

"You learn to realize there are many people in worse shape than you are at PWP," she said. The organization provides support to single parents, has educational programs and speakers and provides some fun for parents and children belonging to the club, she went on to say.

"The word family is defined in many ways these days," she admitted, and added that Parents Without Partners is indeed family-oriented.

Mrs Currie will be presented with the engraved tray at the club's next general meeting.
