TTPPB: out of step with area reality

IT SHOULDN'T come as any surprise that the Township of Tiny has refused to approve the area planning board's 1981 budget especially since both Tiny and Tay have wanted to opt out of the Tiny Tay Peninsula Planning Board.

It should come as no surprise too that Tiny and Tay plan to form a joint committee to study matters of mutual concerns.

And it should come as no surprise that the Town of Midland isn't in any rush to endorse Tiny's Amendment No. 23 as it pertains to zoning along Highway 27.

To be certain, battle lines are starting to form between Midland and Tiny and to a lesser degree between Tay and Midland.

But there's the making of a good fight -- a verbal one at least -- before this sorry mess is resolved.

The area planning board is doomed.

That's no sin. It served a purpose in its time but it is out of step with the wishes of many of its members and supporters.

So let it die a peaceful death. Please!

Wise and otherwise

INTEREST in Penetanguishene's 100th birthday, next year, is mounting.

Last week 50 people turned up to hear details of plans for the town's upcoming centennial celebrations.

Events will be mixed and varied and in some cases will also tie in with Burkevale School's centennial.

These are indeed exciting times in Penetanguishene.

A MONUMENT was installed at St. Ann's Cemetery last week to mark the graves of 10 of Georgian Manor's late residents.

Money for the monument was provided the Manor by an anonymous donor.

The tomb stone, with the County of Simcoe seal engraved on it, is intended to mark the last resting place of those from the Manor who were buried at the cemetery without the benefit of a proper grave marker.

To the anonymous donor, may we say, well done.

It is hardly a laughing matter

A WARNING has been issued by Police Chief Dennis Player of Penetanguishene Police to motorists who use Fuller Avenue between Penetanguishene and Midland.

In recent weeks someone has been stringing fishing line and toilet paper across Fuller near Broad Street.

This prank usually occurs at night. It can be dangerous to unsuspecting motorists who spot these "stringers" at the last moment.

By taking evasive action at the last second motorists put themselves in a position where they might have to slam on their brakes or turn sharply to the left or right in to ditches that line both sides of the road.

The police chief says those responsible for this kind of prank can face criminal charges.

If you know who are behind these pranks we hope you'll share that information with the police chief before someone gets hurt or killed.

Our readers say...

How do you say thank you?

Dear Editor:

So often we are all guilty in ignoring the excellent job our fire departments are doing in our community.

We here at Hindson Marina, Champlain Road, Penetanguishene, nearly had a very serious disaster.

Within minutes after a call was placed to the Penetanguishene Fire Department, to extinguish a boat fire that was spreading to other boats, there were enough firemen and equipment arriving to put out a towering inferno.

Light bulb sale

Dear Editor:

The Midland - Penetanguishene St. John Ambulance Brigade wish to thank the following service clubs and individuals for their support with our light bulb sale on Saturday Oct. 24.

Although these dedicated individuals felt defeated because we were unable to complete the Town of Midland and start into Penetanguishene, the Brigade members would like them to know their time was appreciated and acknowledged:
Midland and Penetanguishene Town Councils
Mr. Nick Boudouris - Dock Lunch for meals
Mr. J. Blackwell - McDonalds for soft drinks
Mr. Frank Myers - Maclean Hunter Television

Canada's last rebellion

Dear Editor:

We would like to inform your readers that we will soon be marking the 100th anniversary of Canada's last rebellion, and we need their help.

In 1885, Louis Riel and his Metis and Indian supporters arose on the Saskatchewan prairies, protesting their treatment at the hands of the government. Militia units from Ontario, Quebec and the Maritimes were called up to quell the rebellion.

To mark this centennial, the Glenbow Museum in Calgary is organizing a major exhibition on the

Quota Club says 'Thanks'

Dear Editor:

As you know, the Quota Club of Huronia has recently produced its first Annual Cookbook.

This would not have been possible without the work done by Pam Carruthers on behalf of the Midland Times.

We the members of the Quota Club of Huronia would like to express our thanks to you and your staff for the fine job you did on our behalf.

Yours very truly,
—Elda Robillard
President
