

Barrel rolled out

Rick Dorion of the Barrel Works takes a cut at a Brian Barnes pitch during what proved to be the final game of the Olympia Fastball League championship series Wednesday at the Midland Arena Diamond. Despite solid batting performances on the part of the Barrel Works, Barnes and his Wye Heritage Marina backers came out with a 7-5 win and an 8-4 victory in the seven-point series. (Photo by Bruce Finlayson).

Win series in six

Wye, they finally did it!

After three straight years of playing second fiddle, Wye Heritage Marina finally carried off the Olympia Fastball League crown with a 7-5 decision over the Barrel Works Wednesday night at the Midland Arena Diamond.

The win was the third of the eight-point series for Wye, and, along with two ties, gave them an eight-points-to-four victory.

Brian Barnes collected the win in Wednesday's game, Jim Pauze took the loss.

It was a back-and-forth struggle with the lead changing hands several times before Keith Bath served up a two-run triple and Red Weatherall knocked a late-game ball over the fence to secure the win.

Steve Dunn hit a seventh-inning leadoff home run for the Works, but the threatened rally stopped there.

The Barrel Works had put a valiant struggle throughout the series and came up with their first win Tuesday when they trimmed the regular-season champs 1-0.

"They put up a pretty good fight," said Wye spokesman Terry Edgar. "They're a good hitting club."

But, it seemed, Wye just wanted it more—and they had pretty good reason for wanting it badly. For the past two seasons they were stopped by Therrien's in the championship final (Therrien's dropped out this season) and were finalists the year before that.

St. Theresa's volleyballers on the prowl

Any time 70 per cent of the eligibles from a school show up to try out for a sport, you're liable to have some pretty good teams.

But then, St. Theresa's High School has always had some pretty good volleyball teams, and the school's student population weren't about to let the coaches down this year.

Of about 100 boys at the Midland school, 70 showed up to try out for the Senior, Junior and Midget volleyball squads, enough to make up solid contenders in all three divisions and, for the first time, allow the formation of an intermediate squad (composed of Junior and Senior-age players) which will engage in exhibition and tournament play throughout the season.

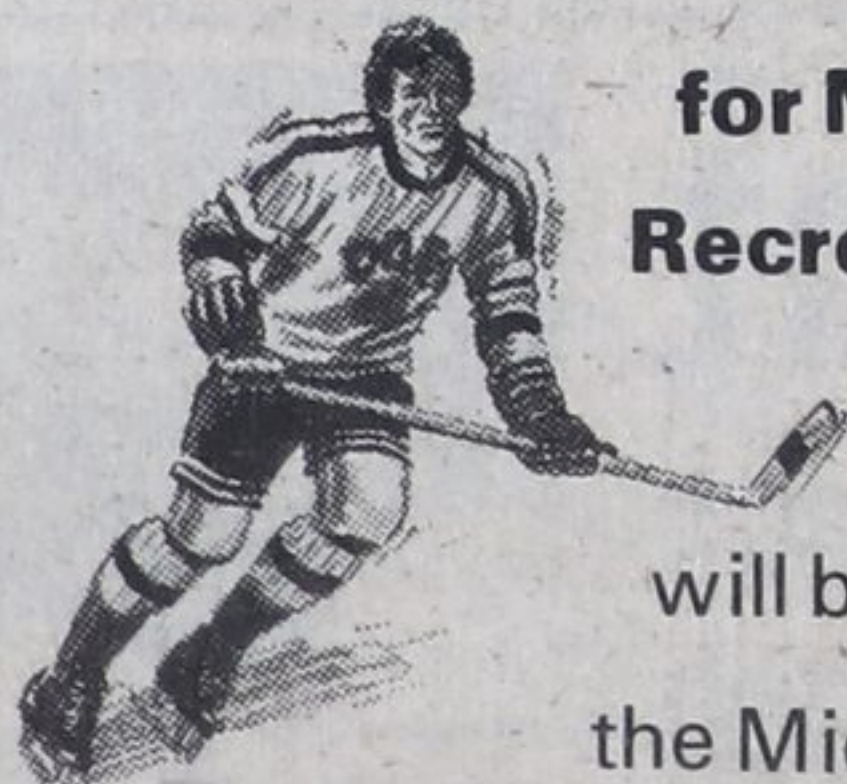

This weekend, all four clubs will be in action as St. T's get down to the business of defending their titles in all three age-groups in the Midland-Huron Volleyball Club Invitational.

The tournament, in which St. T's will battle 14 other schools, will be held all day Saturday at both the Midland Secondary School and the St. Theresa's High School gymnasiums.
