

Spirits not dampened

Peoples Store manager Pauline Teedon said yesterday that the troubles the store has been going through "obviously didn't put a damper on our (Wednesday's) opening." At one point people had to wait outside the store because other shoppers filled the store. "It was really fabulous," Teedon said. People commented on the changes in the store, but not about the dynamiting incident hours before the store opened, or the previous incidents of violence directed against the building, she said.

Labour unrest continues

Members of Local 2557 Carpenters and Joiners Union who were laid off at Furnitex in Midland late in September say the company still owes them for three days from 1981. A company spokesman several weeks ago told The Times, the men had been paid up and all they had to do was to take a look at their pay slips.

Nevertheless about a dozen members of the union visited The Times yesterday to complain "you've told their (the company) side but not ours."

Spokesman for the group, Don Bowan, says the men plan to meet with Simcoe North MP Doug Lewis as well as the Department of Labour "to get to the bottom of this."
