Penetanguishene, Ontario

Martin plays major role

The beauty of our national capital is due, in part, to the efforts of a local Chartered Accountant.

Alan Martin of Moonstone, who runs accounting businesses in Elmvale and Penetanguishene, has represented Ontario for the past two and a half years on the National Capital Commission, which is made up of Commissioners from all provinces and territories of Canada.

"Basically, the N.C.C. is the vehicle by which the Federal government attempts to make the national capital a more meaningful place, of which all Canadians can be proud," he explained.

The N.C.C., now a Crown Corporation of the Federal Government, has existed in one form or another since 1896.

Since 1959, the Commission has been working on bringing into effect a plan for the Ottawa-Hull region designed by Hebert. The development of the 'green belt' and of the Gatineau Park are part of Hebert's outline of growth, said Martin.

The N.C.C. oversees all new construction and locations of all new government buildings in the Ottawa-Hull area, Martin added.

Open house inspection

Amber Jackson, 2 1/2, of Penetanguishene, investigates during the town fire department's open house, on Wednesday, an instructional dummy, one of the displays in the town's fire station. The volunteer fire department firemen recently went door to door promoting fire prevention week.

Majority of street's residents support sewer, Mayor believes

Penetanguishene's mayor expects, in the aftermath of a public meeting on Wednesday, that any opposition by owners of land on Fox Street between the Bay Mooring Yacht Club and Broad Street, to the extension of the town's sewage system, will not be enough to force the town to drop the idea.

"The meeting (Wednesday) went quite well," the Mayor, Ron Bellisle said yesterday. "I think the results of the meeting were very favourable."

Objection to the work

by 51 per cent or more of the property owners would require a hearing. The town hopes to complete Fox Street this year. The project would be dropped if a hearing were necessary because of many objections.

Property owners along the affected length of Fox Street will be charged $35.20 per foot of their frontage. The cost is subsidized by the provincial and federal governments. The unsubsidized cost would be $80 a foot, the mayor said.

If the work is not done before the end of the year, because of winter weather, the town will have to ask the higher levels of government if the unspent grant money can be held for use next year.

About 24 people attended the public meeting, the mayor estimated. The affected stretch of Fox Street includes 38 homeowners. Affected property owners have until the end of the month to file their objection. Don Sherk

Construction, which did the first half of the street this past summer, likely will complete the work.

Dr. Melbye, an expert in the biology of prehistoric Ontario populations, will present a slide show and discussion on how a physical anthropologist can reconstruct patterns of disease, warfare and violence from the archaeological record.

The evening promises to be both informative and entertaining, after all with this title, how can you go wrong?

Coffee will be served after the presentation. For further information phone Sandra Flint or Rosemary Vyvyan at 526-7838.
