

Add cutlery set to gift list

Every family seems to have one person who acts as "chief cook and bottle washer." Whether the cook in your family is into gourmet cuisine or just plain meat and potatoes, a good cutlery set is a great gift to give him this Christmas.

Many consumers tend to shy away from knife purchases because they lack adequate information on cutlery. When shopping for a cutlery set, there are really only three important things to check: selection, sharpness and storage.

According to Regent Sheffield, Ltd. — the western world's largest unit volume producer of knives — a full cutlery set should include a paring, boning, utility, butcher, chef's, carving and bread knife.

"A sharpening steel should be included," notes John A. Haley, vice president/sales and marketing for Regent Sheffield. "However, since most people don't know how to properly sharpen a knife, as a gift item."
