

Queen contest

Friday is the deadline for young women wishing to compete for the title of Elmvale Fall Fair Queen. Last year's Queen, Sharon Taylor, shown above, will crown the 1984 Queen during the Saturday afternoon program, which begins at 2 p.m.

Bicentennial parade in Elmvale

The Elmvale Area seems eager to sponsor a new affair, to cast off chills of autumn, and show we really care.

As we pay a tribute to our past, and celebrate this year, We'll gather as a community in the season of good cheer.

The Lions and the Legion have lead us in the past, And now the Chamber of Commerce has been added to the cast.

To organize a Santa Claus Bicentennial parade. With floats and bands and novelties - a historic promenade.

It was agreed that Sunday would be a fitting time, So business people could be there and find their place in line.

December 9 will be the date we gather to display The colours of the season to the crowds along the way.

Some may come in clown suit while others drive a horse, And those who wear historic dress may win a prize, of course.

We welcome novelty entries by those with great ambition, And floats that show the interest of your local organization.

After we have shivered through an afternoon of viewing, It's to the local rink to find the coffee pot that's brewing.

The tireless youth will tie on skates and tear around the ice, While toddlers sit on Santa's knee for a picture that is nice.

With business keen to show its thanks to local customers, The grand parade may yet attract more winter visitors.

So here's your invitation to employ your gals and guys, In making up an entry that is worthy of a prize.

Specific inquiries about this parade should be addressed to Kitty Burnett or G. Reynolds. (322-1611)
