

Flying Fathers still flying

One of the Flying Fathers is Father Vaughan Quinn who joined the team in 1975. While guarding the net and watching the puck, he has been known to talk to the fans, make dazzling saves, and making fun of the opposing team. Father Quenn is the Director of Sacred Heart Rehabilitation Centre in Detroit. The Fathers played and won a game 15-6 here Monday night against the Midland Oldtimers' Saints.

Flying Fathers beat Midland 15-6

Before a packed house at Midland Centennial Arena, Monday night, the Flying Fathers hockey team defeated Midland Oldtimers 15-6.

Flying Fathers played their first game at North Bay in 1964.

Since then the team has played throughout Ontario, in the Yukon, the Northwest Territories and anywhere else you can think of in Canada as well as the United States and Europe.

The games have raised more than a million dollars for various charities and worthwhile causes such as Crippled Children, the Salvation Army, the Heart Fund, the Canadian National Institute for the Blind and Muscular Dystrophy. Along the way the Flying Fathers have managed to communicate the Christian message and have helped to make countless people laugh.

The concept of Father Brian McKee, the idea of a hockey team originated because a goodly number of priests displayed a certain amount of hockey talent. One of the players, Father Les Costello performed with the Toronto Maple Leafs in the National Hockey League before commencing his studies for the priesthood.

The team is so successful that it has more requests than it can handle. Approximately one hundred requests are received each year. Due to the priestly duties and commitments, the team studies the various invitations and selects about 25 invitations each season.

The Flying Fathers have played against many teams in the past decades but prefer to play against "Old-timer" teams when this is possible.

Father Grant Neville, the team manager has the task of rounding up the players for each game. It is not an easy assignment. The team has very few practices. Each game produces a variety of good hockey and hilarious nonsense.

Proceeds of last Monday night's game were split between the Oldtimers and St. Theresa's High School.
