IN MEMORIAM

Spring, Myrtle:
In loving memory of my Wife, who passed away
November 22, 1983.

In a little country
graveyard,
Where gentle breezes
blow, Rests the one I loved so dearly,
And lost one year ago.

But time has only
proved to me,
How much I miss you
yet.

To me you were someone special,
Someone good and true.
You will never be forgotten,
For I thought the world of you.

Your loving Husband Cliff

Spring, Myrtle:
In loving memory of a dear Mother and Grandmother, Myrtle
Spring, who passed away November 22, 1983.

She left us suddenly,
Her thoughts unknown,
But left us with a
memory,
We are proud to own.

So treasure her, Lord,
In her garden of rest,
For when on earth,
She was one of the best.

Always remembered,
Ian, Laurine, Doreen and Grandson Leonard

Take sting out of winter driving

Cold weather does expensive things to your car's fuel consumption, but there are ways to take the sting out of winter.

A block heater can make it easier to start the engine in cold weather. Rather than wasting the electricity to have it on all night, or getting up very early in the morning to plug it in, buy a timer and set it to go on two hours before you need the car.

Once the car is started, don't go back in the house for a second cup of coffee. Even on cold days you are unlikely to need more than 30 seconds to get the car warm enough for driving.

All parts of the drive train must warm up in order for the car to run at peak efficiency, but the transmission, differential and tires will not warm up unless the car is moving.
Driving the car slowly for the first ten minutes will give the drive train a chance to warm up.

Tires are also affected by winter temperature fluctuations. With each 10 degree celcius drop in temperature tire pressure decreases. It pays to check the tire pressure regularly since underinflated tires make a car use more fuel and are more prone to blow out. Tire pressure can easily be measured with a pressure gauge and is best done when tires have not been used for several hours.
Underinflated tires can be filled free of charge at a service station air pump to the maximum pressure level stamped on the tire sidewall.

As most summer radial tires are not efficient in snow, snow tires should be installed.
With a front wheel drive car it is best to put snow tires on all four wheels. If the summer radials are fitted on non-traction wheels make sure the snow tires installed are also radials.

Be sure to remove snow tires immediately once the snow is gone in the spring. The efficiency decreases significantly when not driven on snow.

It's not a bad idea to change your engine oil at least twice a year and one of those changes should be just before winter sets in. As temperatures drop the engine oil becomes thicker, so take this opportunity to switch to a lower viscosity (thinner) 5W-30 oil. At the same time get your mechanic to set the idle speed, timing, and mixture to manufacturer's specifications. This is also a good time for you to check and fill antifreeze and other fluids.

Planning your trips carefully is important in cold weather. Because cold cars are relatively inefficient, short trips, which don't give your car a chance to warm up are expensive. Try to do all errands in one extended trip. And remember not to leave your car idling when running in to do errands - it take more fuel to leave the car idling than it does to stop and restart it.

Even though drivers tend to drive fewer kilometers in winter months, their fuel consumption does not decrease proportionately. The average Ontario fuel consumption ration for personal cars varies from 13.1 L/km (21.6 mpg) in summer to 15.6 L/km (18.1 mpg) in winter. Any fuel economy tips implemented during winter will pay double dividends. The average car uses about 630 litres from January to March. At 47 cents per litre, that's almost $300. A 15 percent saving - possible with care - would net you almost $45.
