

Town sends letter to Treasurer to boost Baymoorings proposal

Municipal officials in Penetanguishene are hoping a letter sent yesterday to Ontario Treasurer Robert Nixon will boost the chances of getting a government grant to help cover costs of a proposed $9 million expansion of Inn at Baymoorings, Penetanguishene Mayor Ron Bellisle, said yesterday.

Baymoorings owner Albert Melchior unveiled plans for a hotel/convention centre at his Fox Street marina in mid-August and said at that time the ambitious project would need support from a tourism stimulation program jointly funded by the federal and provincial governments. The fund provides money to help defray capital expenditures incurred in major expansion of all-seasons "journey's end" resorts.

Melchior said the Baymoorings proposal meets the governments' criteria for support from the program and asked that the municipality boost the project by letting the governments know the town is behind it.

The municipality has given its approval in principle for the proposed Baymoorings expansion. Bellisle said the letter to Nixon requests the treasurer to meet with municipal officials to discuss the Melchior proposal.

Results in waste control, says MPP

A direct result of the review of Ontario's waste management programs, which was started up in 1982, is a new Environment Ontario regulation that will guarantee a step-by-step monitoring and policing of the disposal of hazardous and liquid industrial wastes.

This reform, called Regulation 309, is aimed at controlling the process of handling industrial wastes from the disposer to the eventual disposal site. The new regulation clearly establishes who has responsibility during this process each step of the way.

Regulation 309 comes out of recommendations made in the Blueprint for Waste Management, which was launched in 1982 and studied by environmentalists, concerned citizens, as well as industry, business and municipalities.

Under the new regulation, which comes into law this fall, those who create liquid and hazardous industrial wastes must register these wastes with the Ministry of Environment within twelve months. A manifest must be filled out for each shipment of waste to ensure that it is recycled, treated or properly disposed of.

Where it is necessary, the regulation will require companies to have tests run on the wastes and to provide the test results to the Ministry prior to having the wastes registered.

The registration process will be the necessary prerequisite before the waste can be handled, shipped or disposed of in any way. The creator of the waste will be responsible for the safe completion of this process.

Regulation 309 matches the goals of the Federal Government's new Transportation of Dangerous Goods Act, which went into effect the beginning of July.

This new regulation was announced in June, by then Environment Minister Susan Fish. It is a responsible and reasonable advance which shows that the then Miller government did take its duties for the environment seriously.

The Ontario Progressive Conservative Party believes a clean, safe environment is a precious heritage to be protected and enjoyed by all.

If you are concerned about environmental issues in your community, you may want to get a hold of a copy of the Environmental Sourcebook. This is a re-edition of a very useful publication put out by the Ontario Environmental Network. The Sourcebook contains a listing of all environmental groups in the province.

Copies of the Environmental Sourcebook are available from Dave Martin, Environmental Sourcebook, c/o TNA, 730 Bathurst St., Toronto M5S 2R4, telephone: 537-0438.

Nov. 11-16 will be busy

The week of Nov. 11 is going to be a busy one for folks living in Ontario.

Remembrance Day this year falls on Monday, Nov. 11.

Then voters go to the polls on Tuesday, Nov. 12, to elect municipal councils, school board members and water and light commissioners. And if that isn't enough, Ontario Tories have picked Toronto as the site for their Nov. 15-16 leadership race at the Metro Convention Centre.

For Progressive Conservatives in the province it will be the second Tory leadership convention this year. It will run one day less than January's to save money.

The Nov. 15-16 "do"

in Toronto will include a tribute to retiring leader Frank Miller who announced several weeks ago that he was giving up the post.

Registration for French courses is next week

French as a second language courses are again being offered at Centre d'activites francaises in Penetanguishene.

As in previous years, both group and private sessions are being offered. The courses are offered by the centre and Georgian College.

Group sessions are held one night a week for three hours. They run for 10 weeks, beginning Monday, Sept. 23.

Registration takes place Sept. 17 and 18, from 7 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. at the centre, on Main Street. A brochure is available at the centre.

Visitors' figures down by 1,500

The number of tourists visiting Penetanguishene in the summer of 1985 was well under the number recorded for the previous year.

At the end of August, 7,432 visitors had registered at the Chamber of Commerce tourist information building at the town dock. As of yesterday, the 1985 figure stood at 7,525. At the end of August, 1984, the figure stood at 9,101.

The lower visitors' figure reflects a decline seen across Canada this year in the number of tourists from the United States. Poor weather this summer no doubt contributed to the decline.

The Chamber office at the town dock is closed weekends after the Labour Day holiday weekend, and will be closed for the season at the end of this week or next, Chamber secretary Joyce Sauve noted yesterday. She said this time of year is a popular time of year for travel primarily among seniors.
