Scouting Around

LLOYD DELANEY

"When you come to the end of a perfect day, And you sit in the campfire light,

Do you think what the end of a perfect day can mean in a real boy's life?"

We are drawing near to the end of a good time for many boys as we conclude another winter of Scouting. Happy events have taken place, and we approach our Annual Meeting, May 5, (Presbyterian Church, Port McNicoll), and our Annual District Scout-Guide Church Parade (St. Mark's Midland May 4, 2 p.m.) when parents and public are welcome.

In January, Scouts and Guides joined in Winterfest with a Torchlight Parade. Beavers, Cubs and Scouts enjoyed "Snow Frolics" at Wyevale. In February, Kub Kar Rallies were held, Scout-Guide week was observed and they attended their sponsor's churches.

In March, the Scout Dinner and Dance was another success, along "Scout the with Scooter" competition.

Beavers, Cubs and Scouts shared special photographer Mike Odesse, and Beausoleil naturalist teaching animal identification. Through the winter boys have practiced for, and earned their proficiency badges, taken part in outings, hikes, and snowshoeing at the Wye Marsh.

Spring brings camping and a District Camp will be held at Lafontaine. Scouts will do more good turns clearing trails at the Wye Marsh. Port McNicoll Scouts are preparing for their June canoe trip once again. Their leaders are giving a session on Canoe Trip Planning (Venturers) for the Regional Scout Conference in Orillia, April 26.

Our Region extends from Oshawa to Burk's Falls with some 500 leaders attending.

We thank our sponsors, group committees, leaders and lads. Leaders leave their lifetime impression on boys. Their thanks is spelled out the lives of service these young men will live in years to come. Meanwhile we help them progress from Beavers to Cubs, to Scouts, to Venturers and Leaders and good citizens all.

The count that counts

Canadian Census of population has played a vital and unique role history as a tool for demographic, mic, and development of the country and its people. Over the years, the throughout Canadian census has evolved to keep up with the measuring the changes that occur as a econo- nation grows and social matures. The primary purpose of the census, however, has remained constant: to gather detailed information about the nation's people and their living condition.

Today, 320 years after

Jean Talon conducted the first modern census in what was then New France, the census remains the most complete source of information about Canadians. All levels of government, business and associations, representing a wide diversity of interests, use information provided by the census.

Federal, provincial and local governments rely on census data for a number of legislative and planning purposes. For example, census population figures are needed to help determine the allocation of seats in the House
