Councillors agree

Tiny councillors agreed last week that the fee increase for municipal searches would stay. The search fee was set, during council's previous meeting, at $75, a 300 per cent hike. Councillor Ross Hastings said the fee increase was necessary to cover the cost of a search.

Beaches to see ATV patrols

The Township of Tiny passed a bylaw which authorized the hiring of four bylaw enforcement officers at its June meeting on Wednesday.

The new peace officers are students from the law enforcement program at Georgian College. They will be responsible for issuing parking tickets and enforcing local bylaws.

One of ordinances the officers will upholding is Tiny's anti-littering bylaw which has been toughened with a $100 fine. The problem of litter in the township was described as 'monumental' during the meeting. Guy Maurice described the amount of garbage left after hours at the gates of the Paue dump as a disgrace. Council also heard that littering by motorists was an increasing problem.

In its correspondence, council received a letter from MacKinnon, DeVillers, Peet and Deacon protesting the increase in fees for municipal searches. The fee was increased at the previous council meeting from $25 to $75. Councillor Ross Hastings said the increase in the fee was necessary to offset the cost of the search.

"Somebody's got to pay for it."

The searches are undertaken by legal firm, estate agents and others and the fee passed on to their clients. The letter described the 300 percent increase as sudden and dramatic.

Celstin (Pete) Bidan who has operated Huronia Animal Control for the past 12 years submitted a tender for another two-year term to council.

Bidan asked for and got a five percent increase in his operating cost, paid for by Tiny ratepayers.

Bridan stated in his letter that when he started the shelter, he picked the best ideas from others shelters and noted that his shelter was used as a model by other municipalities.

Deputy Reeve Peter Brasher complimented Bridan's work. Reeve Morris Darby said council should meet him.

Council also decided to get tough with operators of All Terrain Vehicles (ATV) who operate in prohibited areas.

Ratepayers in Bluewater say the beach has been turned into a race track by ATV users. Council is planning to fight back with its own ATV. Councillor Ross Hastings said its the only way to slow down the problem noting that the OPP had once shown up with their ATV and 'surprised' the violators.

Clerk Administrator Guy Maurice said he would instruct the bylaw department to look into the cost of leasing an ATV and report back to council.
