Helping the Army

Local Royal LePage manager Dave Bridgeman shows a sample of the 10,000 bags which the 25 Royal LePage employees will distribute door-to-door in early December. Recipients can donate food to the Salvation Army and leave the donation at any Royal LePage office.

Reinforcements called in for Christmas Cheer campaign

The Salvation Army Christmas Cheer campaign is going to receive a big boost this year from a real estate company.

Royal LePage's 24 area employees on Dec. 1 and 2 are going to leave a plastic bag on the doorknob of every household in Midland and Penetanguishene, Port McNicoll and Victoria Harbour, Elmvale and Coldwater.

Instructions attached to each bag will tell people they can use it to donate non-perishable food and take the food in the bag to one of the Royal LePage offices in Coldwater or Elmvale, or to the main office in Mountainview Mall.

Royal LePage manager Dave Bridgeman estimates 10,000 households will be visited. "We might need some more help." A few non-LePage people who have heard already of the idea have volunteered, he said.

December is a slower time for the year for real estate sales. And, Bridgeman said, "The Salvation Army is a very good organization and one we wanted to give a helping hand to."

The house to house approach is "a great way to cover the whole community. We can possibly hit every house with the hope that everyone will contribute." Otherwise not everyone will have heard about the Christmas Cheer campaign on the radio or have read about it. "This is new for us. I hope that it works well. We want to do it again."

Bridgeman's hope is that the idea will spread. Royal LePage's Whitby office did the same work last year. "Head office is very interested as to what the outcome is." Bridgeman would like to see Royal LePage offices across Ontario helping the Salvation Army before Christmas.

First seminar on waste Sat.

You can "fill in the gap." And you can begin this Saturday.

At 10 a.m. the Civic Centre on Yonge Street in Midland will fill up with everyone from politicians to captains of industry to ordinary people.

All will be there to find out some new ways to cope with our massive waste problem.

That's what the Georgian Shore Waste Reduction Group is planning for this Saturday as it holds its first ever waste reduction seminar.

Guest speakers and videotapes will tell the story of recycling programs that work - and which can save towns like Midland and Penetang millions of dollars.

"Our ideas will be based on reality," said Peter Stubbins, one of the organizers. "It will not be totally hypothetical."

Among the ideas to surface at the seminar will be one appealing directly to industries: "Profits From Pollution," an audio-video show on how to save money and reduce waste. It's produced by Pollution Probe.

Stubbins will also draw upon his collection of waste-reduction video tapes for the seminar.
