

Just a peek

The fifth annual car show at Midland's Mountainview Mall last week provided a glimpse of what is to come at the Georgian Bay Custom Car Club's huge show later this year at Centennial Arena. First prize was won by Bruce Dunn for his 1970 Mustang; second went to Cliff Patenaude for his 1957 Ford; third to B.

Anderson for a classic 1965 Mustang convertible. Over 1,000 people stopped to view the show.

No permit? No sundeck

A person building a sun deck in Midland needs a building permit. The town council has agreed to remind people of this.

The committee of adjustment reported to the council that it has had to rule on two cases of a partially-constructed sun deck whose owner didn't have a building permit.

In the first case, the sun deck was not permitted. The owner appealed to the Ontario Municipal Board and lost.

The council was asked to place advertisements in the local newspapers to tell people that decks, pools, and garages can't be built without permission.

Watson photo advisor's gift

Bonnie Morrison was the recent recipient of a Budd Watson photograph at a reception held in her honor. She is presently employed by the Simcoe County Board of Education as the area primary-junior consultant.

She has been seconded by the Ministry of Education for a two-year period, beginning in September as an advisor to school boards throughout the province regarding the implementation of the ministry's new policy statement for science.

About 70 elementary teachers and principals gathered to express their congratulations and to show their appreciation of the many years of hard work Bonnie has given to primary education.

Winner

Bonnie Morrison holds her gift.

Free Methodists step closer to non-profit house project

The Free Methodist Church of Midland is one step closer to bringing to Midland a government-subsidised non-profit apartment building for the developmentally handicapped.

Rev. Hubert Schwartz

has received from the town council its approval in principle.

The Free Methodist Church has a long road to travel yet, she suggested.

The proposed building would be supported by the Free Methodist Church and the Ministry of Housing.

Don't change county to region, says Day

"Regional government we don't need," Bev Day said on behalf of himself and Nancy Keefe.

Day and Keefe are Midland's representatives on Simcoe County Council.

Penetanguishene's representative on the county council, Art Stewart, expressed the same attitude at his council's May meeting.

Simcoe County doesn't want a "regional" form of government, Reeve Day said. "It doesn't work that well."

The Consultation Committee on County Government Reform, chaired by Liberal MPP Charlie Tatham of Oxford, is meeting representatives of the county council and the county's municipalities and the public today (Wednesday).

The local politicians see the provincial government's interest in talking about restructuring of county government as a way of leading into regional government.

Several counties near Metropolitan Toronto -- such as Peel and Halton -- had regional government implemented years ago.

Realtor wins prize

Local realtor Bryan Richardson of Midland has earned international recognition.

Richardson a member of the staff of Bryson McQuirter Realty World earned second place in residential transactions, competing against 15,000 other Realty World professionals from throughout Canada and the U.S.

The board of directors for the proposed building has accepted advice from the ministry and cut the scale of its proposal by 80 per cent, he said.

The Huronia Association for the Mentally Retarded has received funding for 10 units. Five units were approved for Penetanguishene, he said.

Deputy Reeve Nancy Keefe said that she is familiar with the history of those two applications. Five years had passed before approval.

Roughing it in Great Outdoors

Chester, a mild-mannered everyman, decides to take his family and get back to nature in The Great Outdoors.

The family packs up the 4x4 and leaves Chicago for wide open spaces. Upon arrival at the cabin in the woods, they not only encounter the usual array of vacation pests, such as mosquitoes, racoons, bears and local hicks, but as well they are blessed by a surprise visit from Chester's brother-in-law, Roman. He's a loud-mouthed know it all boar whose idea of roughing it is when the electricity is shut off.

Roman's idea of a one-week vacation is to see how close he can come to killing Chester while having fun.

Last summer actor John Candy starred in Summer Rental, which had a similar plot. Candy is more successful this time around with physical comedy and his attempts at waterskiing and fishing are hilarious.

When the action slows down, the film sinks into the weeds due to the thin story line. Good light summer comedy, although Candy and co-star Dan Akroyd are capable of much more given something more to work with. No carnage, no violence, PG.

Rating: two stars.
