Will help expand staff

MPP delivers cheque to aid ambulance service

Muskoka-Georgian Bay MPP Ken Black was at the Highland Inn last Wednesday to give the Midland and District Ambulance Service a cheque for $74,000. The money will be used to expand the number of staff who operate the service.

According to Steve Laurin, the owner and operator of the MDAS, the annual operating budget of the service is "over $600,000."

By early fall, three staffed ambulances will be available at the Midland ambulance station during weekdays, two in the evening and one at night. On weekends, there will be two ambulances during the day and evening and one at night. Two new attendant-drivers will be hired.

The MDAS operates with three vehicles and 21 full-time staff. Laurin says that's an adequate number of both vehicles and people to properly service an area of this size.

Black said the funding represented the provincial government's concern for health-care in rural areas. "The ministry realizes the importance of maintaining adequate staffing for ambulance services based in smaller communities," he said.

Healthy money

Steve Laurin, the owner and operator of the Midland and District Ambulance Service was at the Highland Inn last Wednesday to learn about a $74,000 grant from the provincial government to hire more staff. Muskoka-Georgian Bay MPP Ken Black was representing the Ministry of Health. Black said the money represented the government's continued commitment to health care in the province.
