Another charged in proxy inquiry

by Michael Suedfeld
Staff Writer

The common-law wife of Wasaga Beach's former deputy reeve has been charged following the investigation into voting irregularities in the Nov. 14, 1988 municipal elections.

Maria Barbara Pasiud faces 25 charges of altering electoral documents, said Det. Sgt. Gary Higgins of the OPP's anti-rackets squad.

Pasiud was charged on Monday, while Antunes was charged with 35 counts of uttering forged documents and 35 counts of damaging electoral documents on Jan. 11.

Higgins said no further charges are expected in the case, though the investigation is ongoing.

The charges, relating to proxy voting irregularities, were laid against the couple after an investigation, which was launched immediately following advance poll voting on Nov. 7.

Antunes was defeated in his bid to become Wasaga Beach's mayor in the election.

Both Antunes and Pasiud are scheduled to appear in Collingwood Provincial Court on Feb. 1.

If convicted, Antunes faces a maximum 14 year sentence for the indictable offence of uttering forged documents and five years imprisonment for damaging electoral documents. Pasiud could be sentenced to maximum five years imprisonment if found guilty.

Government warned about proxy votes McCague says

Simcoe West MPP George McCague says opposition parties warned Ontario's Liberal government it should hold off on instituting Municipal Election Act changes.

McCague, a Conservative, said his party thought the legislation should not have been so passed so hastily and felt the government could have waited until the 1991 municipal elections before acting.

Changes made to the proxy voting system resulted in confusion, especially for Wasaga Beach and Tiny Township, which have large numbers of cottagers.

The new system made it much easier for them to vote by proxy.

McCague said the legislation may require another look by the province.

He added that he has always been in favor of allowing proxy voting.
