Shot-gun wielding youth charged

Sunday in Midland started with the bang which propelled shotgun shell pellets into the interior of an Algonquin Drive home.

Between 5:20 a.m. and 7:05 a.m. a police officer was wounded and a 16-year-old Midland youth was charged with four counts of attempted murder. Two shells were fired at Midland Police constables Clement "Clem" Quesnelle and Glenn Bannon. Quesnelle was hit in the left temple, shoulder, and upper arm. The officers had responded to a complaint of a person shooting at a house. In the dark, they were following tracks through snow into the residential construction site south of Algonquin Drive when they encountered a figure with a gun.

The figure fired twice at the officers, hitting Quesnelle, instead of dropping his weapon as ordered.

The incident which turned neighbors into frightened spectators, began when a shotgun was fired at close range at the glass of the front door of 750 Algonquin Drive. The pellets spread and did considerable interior damage.

Two shells were then fired at the rear of the house. Pellets from one shell burst through a rear upstairs bedroom window while the woman resident was bending over. She had just spotted the attacker and yelled at him.

Pellets from a third shell sprayed across the back of the house after the male resident risked looking out.

As the sky brightened around 7 a.m., the suspect without warning appeared to police, walking out of the construction site with his hands raised.

He held what turned out to be a sawedoff shotgun in one hand and an ammunition belt in the other hand.

He obeyed an order to drop the gun and belt and to lie on Galloway Boulevard. He was arrested between the house he attacked and the spot where the constable was wounded.

Sixteen shells were found in the belt. Nine spaces for shells were empty.

Later Sunday, the police learned that the home of the 16-year-old had been damaged.

The youth cannot be identified because of his age.

Middy Sunday, the two adults who were fired upon told a reporter, "We have no comment. We're still in a state of shock."

Motive for the attack on the family's house has not been announced. Chief of Police Ernie Bates called the incident a shooting spree, although only one Algonquin Drive house was damaged.

When the suspect surrendered, Bates, seven other Midland police officers, and Penetanguishene police Const. Doug Geffros, armed with revolvers and shotguns, were in position outside the construction site, waiting for daylight.

OPP officers assisted by patrolling King Street and Heritage Drive, the far sides of the area in which the suspect hid.

If the suspect had not surrendered before daylight, tracking dogs from Peterborough and an OPP helicopter would have been available to the town police.

The suspect was scheduled to appear for a bail hearing Tuesday in Barrie. He was in custody at the Metro West Detention Centre.

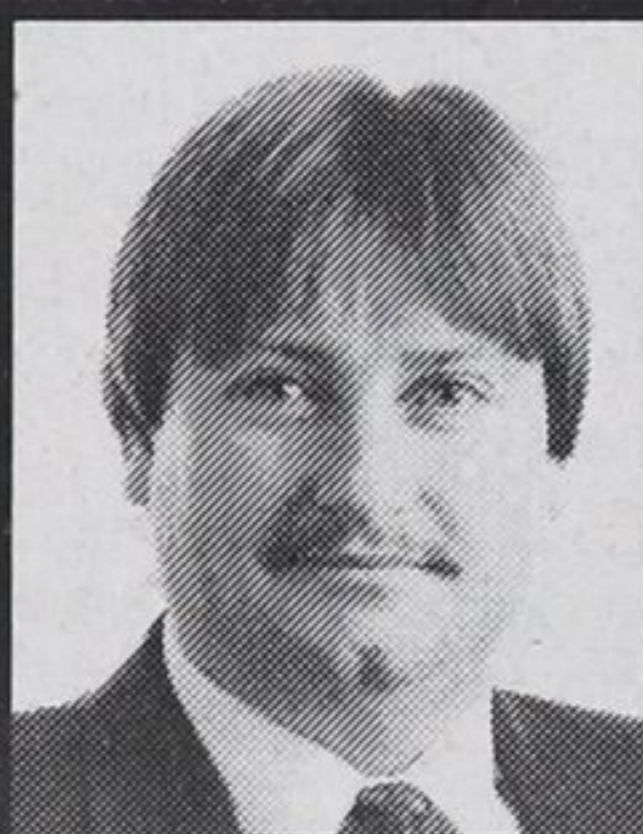

The shooting has done nothing to change Bates's belief that the Young Offenders Act needs to be amended.

First shot

The shooting in southeast Midland Sunday which ended with a Midland youth charged with four counts of attempted murder began with a shotgun blast through the front door of an Algonquin Drive home. No one in the house was injured.

Students speaking up

Students, two from St. Luis and two from St. Ann's, took part in a public speaking contest at the Georgian Manor, sponsored by the Catholic Women's League last Wednesday.

Deedra Levy, a St. Luis student, won first prize and the right to compete in the Northern Region public speaking contest in Elmvale March 3.

The students each had to speak on a prepared subject as well as a mystery topic supplied by the judges.

A purpose of the unknown topic is to show the judges how well the students can adapt to an on-the-spot situation.

Levy's chosen subject of Marilyn Monroe impressed the judges, which helped her earn the top spot in the contest.

Runner-up was Keith Crerar from St. Ann's, followed by Danielle Robertson of St. Luis and Julie Gignac of St. Ann's.
