

Students complete wood furniture

With the completion of the first semester at Le Caron, woodworking students are making arrangements to move their furniture products home.

Teacher Andre Forget has completed a furniture making unit with a group of 11 students in the temporary shop facilities.

The furniture was designed by the course instructor but each student had to make a selection, read the plans, select materials and design or select individual carvings for the panels on the door fronts.

Each project cost approximately $70 for materials and hardware but the finished products have a value of at least $500 each.

These bar units will be taken home by each student; some will become family 'heirlooms' while others will be sold to raise money for tuition next year.

Forget expressed great satisfaction with the actual construction and final products.

"The high quality of the products reflects the interest of the students in the program."

Grade 12 student Leon Marchildon chose a soft pine for his materials with a clear finish and displayed his project in the school library recently.

"I decided to do a carving of my own design and chose a leaf on clouds as a sort of symbolic life design."

The carving alone represents about 20 hours of work for the Le Caron student. Marchildon's interest in woodworking was sparked by this opportunity to construct a major piece of furniture and as a result of this has chosen to pursue his education in this area.

He will continue immediately in a cooperative credit in the community at the Recovery Room in Midland, then will go on to study woodworking at George Brown College.

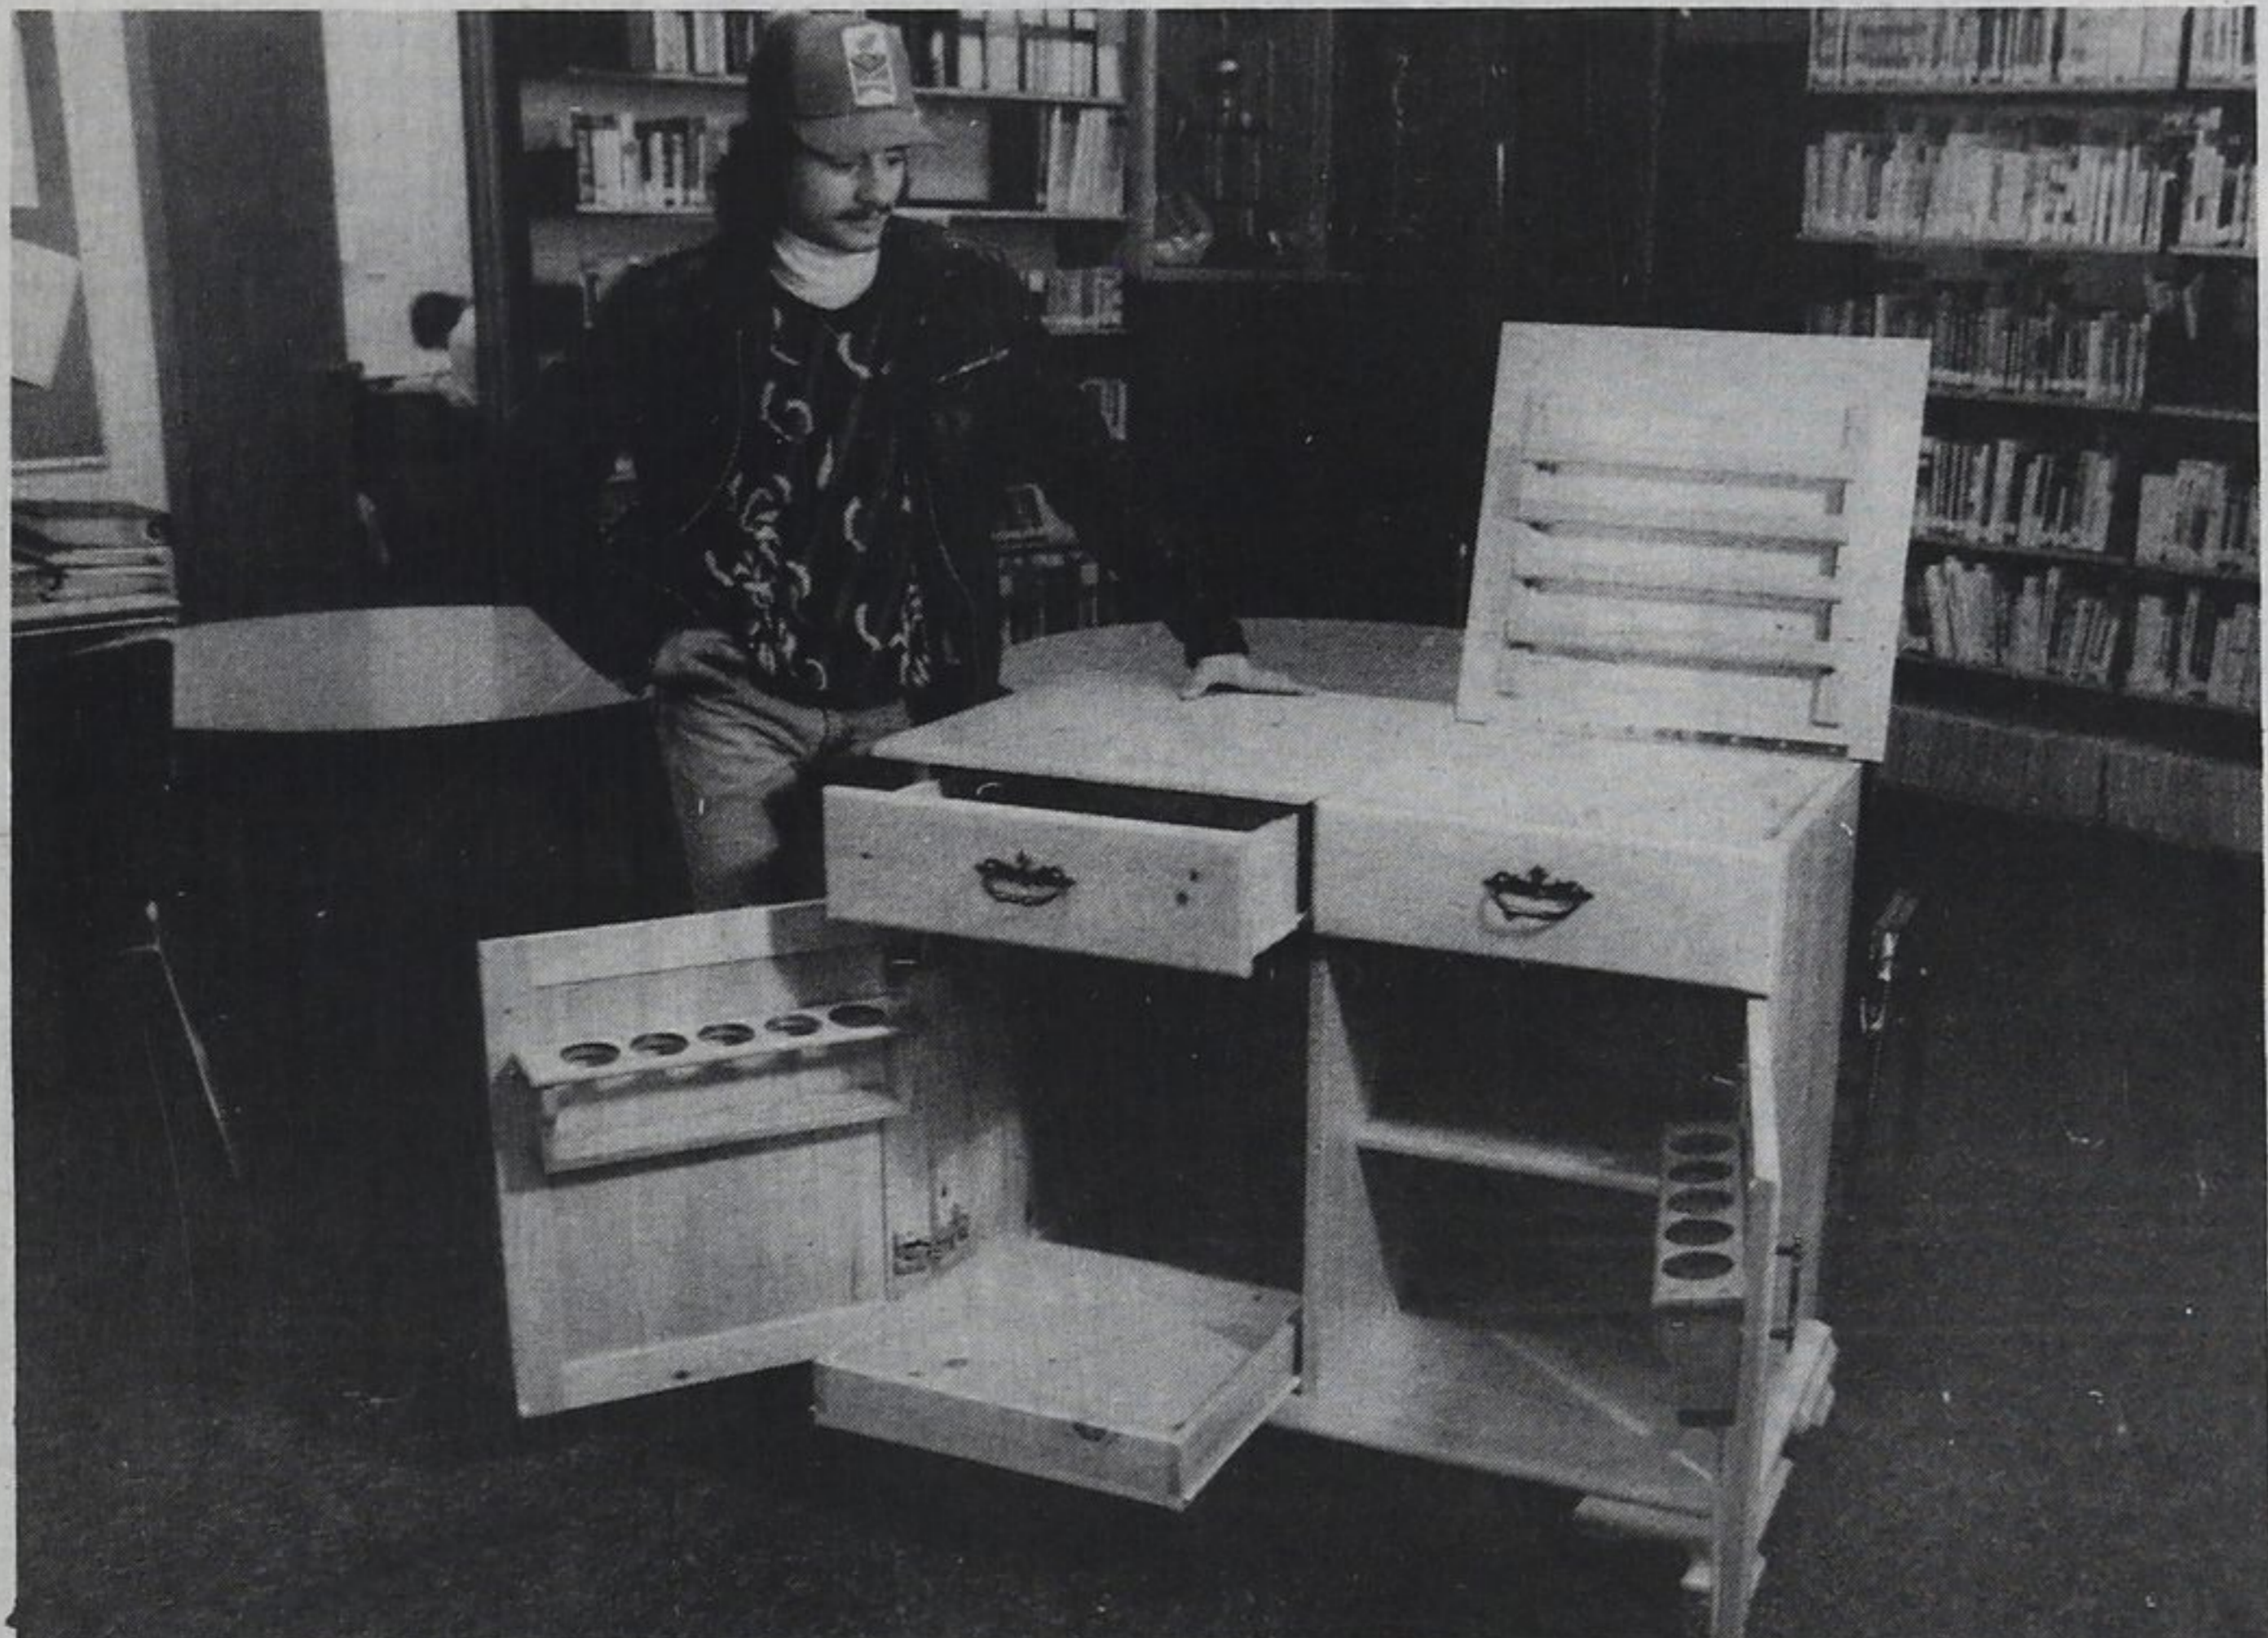

The school anticipates further enthusiasm of this type with the new construction shop to be opened in September.

The facility will have

1,500 square feet of floor space and will include such new equipment as a shaper, a stroke sander, a 20-inch planer and a wide variety of modern saws. "This facility will be as modern and as well-equipped as any industrial woodshop in the area," said department head Bernard Cousineau.
