Howard's season ends on sour note

by David Gravelle
Special Report

The Walkman-wearing Russ Howard rink has seen it's song end, albeit on a wrong note.

Looking over the Penetanguishene Curling Club team's performance at last week's Labatt Brier in Saskatoon, a third place finish isn't all that bad. But, for the 1987 world champions it wasn't first place and that's difficult to accept.

Alberta's Pat Ryan successfully defended his Canadian title, defeating B.C.'s Rick Folk, 3-2, in a match displaying few dramatic shots.

Ryan's Edmonton rink will attempt to return the world championship banner to Canada, when they travel to the 1989 world championships in Milwaukee, Wis., from April 2-9. Last season they lost in the final to Norway.

The last Canadian team to win the world title was in 1987, when Russ Howard and his rink of Glenn Howard, Tim Belcourt, Kent Carstairs, and Larry Merkley defeated Roger Schmidt of West Germany under the dome in Vancouver.

Howard's goal to repeat that feat fell flat last Saturday in Saskatchewan Place. After finishing tied for first place with an 8-3 record, the Ontario representatives were pushed to third place, because of their round robin defeats to Ryan and Folk.

That set up a semi-final between Howard and Folk, a matchup many Ontario supporters liked. They applauded it even more when Russ Howard made an angle raise in the first end to steal two, and put the B.C. rink on the run right away.

But, the Howard killer instinct wasn't there, and after two blank ends, Folk tied the game at two. Howard's song continued at the wrong speed, in the fifth end when he gave up another steal.

In the sixth, Folk built up a wall of rocks around the four-foot circle, leaving the Penetanguishene skip with only a tough triple takeout to salvage one. The stone curled about an inch too far, and the triple became only a single, and a steal of two for B.C. After six end, the 1980 world champs led the 1987 World Champs 5-2.

Congratulations

Penetang's lead Kent Carstairs receives his bronze medal at the closing ceremonies while the team looks on. The Howard rink's third place finish at the Saskatoon Brier was a disappointing one; however, being third in a field of five former world champions and the defending champion is an accomplishment which deserves praise.

Student wins a place in Ryerson

Andrew Forget of Penetanguishene, a student in applied computer science at Toronto's Ryerson Polytechnical Institute, is a Canada Scholarship recipient.

The scholarship program, sponsored by the federal government, provides up to $8,000 during four years to first-year college and university students, who pursue degrees in science, engineering and related disciplines.

In addition to the cash award, Forget also received a commemorative pin and a certificate for his achievement.

Fruit taken off shelves

Gianetto's Fruit Market and the other customers of Borsa's wholesale fruit business in Midland had no fruit Tuesday.

Peaches, plums, nectarines and grapes from Chile were kept in Borsa's warehouse and withdrawn from shelves following a warning that some Chilean fruit was contaminated with arsenic.

Customers calling Gianetto's yesterday (Tuesday) were advised to throw out their fruit.

Geri Borsa said she expects the cases of Chilean fruit in their warehouse will be allowed to rot. As of yesterday she didn't know if Borsa's would receive a refund from their suppliers at the Ontario Food Terminal.

Borsa's has retail customers in Midland, Penetanguishene and Honey Harbour.
