The Quebec Chronicle says suspicion has lately arisen in the township of Arthabaska, with regard to the death of Simeon Marchand, who died in that township about four months ago, having been poisoned, it is thought by his wife. It seems that this woman, Esther Boulee, kept company with another man of that place also, Charles Rochet by name. A short time after the death of Marchand, his widow went away with Rochet, leaving her three children behind her, while Rochet in like manner left his wife and five children.
