Kind heaven, bless the farmer's wife With happiness and health; Her virtuous ways shall speak her praise Better than rank or wealth.

Her husband's keart-O happy man Shall safely trust his wife ; In drink and food she'll do him good Through all her useful life,

For winter and for summer wear. She works in wool and flax And while she spins she sweetly sings The honors of her sex.

She rises e'er the morning light To give her household bread; New work prepares, and old repairs, Wille sluggards are in bed.

Ste mile her kine, she makes her cheese Her butter's sweet and clean ; Her linen's white, her bread is light-She's happier than a Queen.

No wilful waste, or woeful want, Shall come, within her door , In time of need, she'll clothe and feed, The industrious humble poor.

She's net afraid of frost or snow, For all her household band-Happy and glad, are warmly clad By her industrious hand.

Her husband, through her plous deeds, Is known where'er he goes ; He not affraid to lift his head 'Mids! friends er haughty foes,

The law of kindness rules her tongue ; She eats no idle bread, Honour and truth, in age and youth, Shall well anoint her head.

Her children (happy is their tot !) Shall bless their mother's name, Her husband's praise shall crown her days. And herald forth her name.

Though favor may deceitful prove. And beauty bloom in vain ; The virtuous wife of pious life In bliss supreme shall reign !
