Miscellaneous.

"I haven't another word to say, wife, I never dispute with fools." "No, no, husband you are very sure to agree with them."

"We have seen ladies not only too weak to bear food, but even too weak to bear contradiction."

"Women can easily preserve their youth; for she who captivates the heart and under-

"Mrs. Smith, did you say, in the hearing of my little girl, that I was a great rusty cat?" "No, my dear Mrs. Jones; I said you were a great aristocrat."

"Husband, I must have some change today. Well, stay at home and take care of the children that will be change enough, anyhow."

"Cesar the second.—Prince Napoleon is to be sent to the blockade of Venice, so as to give him an opportunity of writing home, Venice, vult, vult."

"Why in such a hurry?" said a man to an acquaintance. "Sir," he replied, "I have bought a new bonnet for my wife, and fear the fashion may change before I get home."

"At a hotel-table one day, one boarder remarked to his neighbor: 'This must be a very healthy place for chickens.' 'Why?' asked the other. 'Because I never see any dead ones about!'"

"The School for Butchers.—A company of butchers has left Paris to join the French army. It is Italy to be made a greater slaughter-house than it already is? or have these butchers simply gone to improve themselves in their business by tak-

"An Army that takes Everything.—If the marauding exploits that are reported of the Austrians in Lombardy be true—paying for nothing, and helping themselves to everything—we should say that Austria could boast of the largest rade corps in the world. So perfect is every Austrian appar-

"All alive.—A servant girl was sent by her mistress, during warm weather, for a piece of beef. The butcher forwarded it in due course, but on removing a portion of the suet, the indications of life which presented themselves were not to be mistaken.
Next day the same girl went for a leg of lamb; and 'are you sure it is sweet?' was an inquiry she duly made. 'Positively,' said the butcher, 'the lamb was alive yesterday.' 'So was the beef you gave me,' replied the unfortunate handmaid."

"The Umbrella Biter Bit.—It rained hopelessly. The clouds came down in sheets and sluices. Mons. de H—, an elegant 'of the first water,' found this second water too wet for him. He was islanded under another man's portico, and not a hackney coach or an umbrella with-corner comes a plain citizen, housed under a protecting heaven of blue cotton and whalebone; but, under this enviable umbrella walking alone. A thought seizes Mons. de H—, He rushes to the citizen's side, and seizes him affectionately by the arm, commences the eager narration of a touching train of events. Not giving his astonished listener time to respond, he hurries him along—sharing his umbrella, of course, as he goes, and clinging closely to his side, and voicing the confidential communications till they arrive at the Boulevard, he steps at a safe, and then for the first time, apparently, takes a surprised look at the face of his umbrella-
