A youth and maid, one winter night, Were sitting in the corner;
His name, we're told, was Joshua White,
And hers was Patience Warner.

Not much the pretty maiden said, Beside the young man sitting; Her cheeks were flushed a rosy red, Her eyes bent on her knitting.

Nor could be guess what thoughts of him Were to her bosom flocking. As her fair fingers, swift and slim Flew round and round the stocking.

While, as for Joshna, bashful youth, His words grew few and fewer; Though all the time, to tell the truth, His chair edged nearer to her.

Meantime her ball of yarn gave out, She knit so fast and steady ; And he must give his aid, no doubt,

To get another ready.

He held the skein; of course the thread Got tangled, snarled, and twisted;

To him who her assisted. Good chance was this for tangue-tied chur To shorten all palaver;
"Have patience," cried he, "dearest girl!

The deed was done; no more, that night, Clicked needless in the corner; And she is Mrs. Joshua White That once was Patience Warner

And may I really have her?"

Young Men—Take Particular

There is an evil labil sometimes indulged in by boys, in solitude, often growing up with them to manipod, and which, if not reformed by them in due time, not only begets serious obstacles to natrimonial happiness, but gives rise to a series of protracted, insidious, and devastating affections. Few of those who give way to this pernicious practice are aware of the consequences, until they find the nervous system shattered, feel strange and unaccountable toolings, and vague fears in the mind.
