

Poetry.

AN ELECTRIC POEM.

The night has come, but not too soon; Westward the star of empire takes its way; Ye banks and braes of bonny dooms!

There was a sound of revelry by night, On Lin'en when the sun was low: A voice cried, far up the height,

What if a little rain should fall, I have not loved the world, nor the world me! Ah, well-a-day!

My heart leaps up with joy to see A princely by the water's side; Zacheus, he did climb the tree;

The prayer of Ajax was for light, The light that never was on sea or shore; Pudding and beef make Britons fight,

Under a spreading chestnut tree, For hours together sat, I and my Annetel Lee;

Truth crush'd to earth shall rise again, And waste its sweetness on the desert air; In thunder, lightning, or in rain,

Tell me not in mournful numbers, The child is father of the man; They can conquer who believe they can,

A change came o'er the spirit of my dream; What I wish, is right; And things are not what they seem;

Miscellaneous.

There is many a man whose tongue might govern multitudes, if he could govern his tongue.

Deliver us from a woman with a spirit of opposition in her soul, who will pick you up on the point of a sharp sentence as if you were a dropped stitch in her knitting work.

Query. Would a man who got intoxicated with delight, be turned out of the temperance society.

Remember.—What a world of gossip would be prevented if it was only remembered that the person who tells you of the faults of others, intends to tell others of your faults.

The eye of the law.—It has become so weak from the want of proper practice in the different courts, that it is going to advertise for a pupil.

'Have you any traveling inkstands?' asked a lady of a young stationer.—'No, sir; we have them with feet and legs, but they are not old enough to travel yet.'

He who has made time his friend, will have little to fear from his enemies; but he that has made it his enemy, will have little to hope from his friends.

The highest and most characteristic glory of all earthly beauty is to make us aspire to a heavenly one; and a woman is great in proportion to the idea she suggests.

'A bad wife,' says an old author, 'is confusion, weakness, discomfiture, despair; bad enough, is it not, good woman?'

Spell the word Oxford without using a single letter belonging to it. Your may insert a little Cockney pronunciation, however, if you please. Give it up, eh!—Hawks-pint.

How TO RUIN YOUR HEALTH.—1st. Stop in bed late. 2nd. Eat hot suppers. 3rd. Turn day into night, night into day. 4th. Take no exercise. 5th. Always ride when you cannot walk. 6th. Never mind about wet feet. 7th. Have half-a-dozen doctors. 8th. Drink all the medicine they send you. 9th. Try every new quack. 10th. If that doesn't kill you, quack yourself.

A young lady being addressed by a gentleman much older than herself, observed to him that the only objection she had to a union with him was the probability of his dying before her and leaving her to the sorrows of widowhood. 'To which he made the apt and delicately complimentary reply, 'Blessed is the man who hath a virtuous wife, for the number of his days shall be doubled.'

A colored cook expected company of her own kind, and was at a loss how to entertain her friends. Her mistress said: 'Child, you must make an apology.'—'Ladies, how can I make it? I got no apples, no eggs, no butter, no lard, no make it wid.'

LADIES AND LOOKING GLASSES.—'Well, to my mind, looking-glasses are the greatest enemies ladies have; they ought all to be broken to everlasting smash. It isn't that they are false, for they ain't; they will reflect the truth if they are allowed. But, unfortunately, truth never looks into them. When a woman consults her glass, she wishes to be pleased, she wants to be flattered, and to be on good terms with herself, so she treats it as she would her lover; she goes up to it all smiles, looking as amiable and as beautiful as she can. She assumes the most winning air; she gazes at the image with all the affection she can call up; her eyes beam with intelligence and with love, and her lips appear all a woman could wish, or a man covet. Well, in course the mirror gives back that false face to its owner, as it receives it; it ain't fair, therefore, to blame it for being unfaithful.'
