Old anglers say that, if you wish to eatch a ne fish you must not throw your hait directly thin. Young ladies may take notice.

An old lady who was about to enter on he arth marriage complained to a friend tha fourth marriage complained to a friend that "there never was any poor woman so plaged with the dying sort of mon."

Mr. Happy "was never more s-s-sober in the hole course of his life," but when his friend it liggery asked him to take a chair, he said e would "wait till one came round."

Women can easily preserve their youth; for she who captivates the heart and understanding there grows old. The broken word, the sped arrow, pas. life and neglected opportunity, never return.

The pleasantest things in the world art leasant thoughts, and the greatest art in life in have as many of thom as possible.

A locturer declares; that the ladies are at the bold of all science—"since curiosity is the mother of discovery!"

A practical individual, hearing a man quoting Ion, "It is a little thing to give a cup of valer," replied "Yes, blamed little! A fellow that wouldn't give you a glass of teer ought to be kicked.

Grattrupe.—If gratitude were looked upon more than it is, as a distinct duty—a dost to be discharged without involving any other payment, I am included to think its claims would be more frequently attended to than day now are. But few persons are in the habit of sufficiently separating gratitude from admiration, and thus they hold thesselves above being grateful in due proportion to the aged, the unenlightened, or the insignificant; because they do not often look disposed to offer to such persons the firbute of their praise. Perhaps they are a little askinged to these word applying to so inferior a source; while, on the other hand whey are too proud to acknowledge that they are deeply indebted to those whom they admire.
