From the Leader's Correspondence

Sin, -- While persuing the columns of the daily Globe of Friday last, my attentthere was over one hundred and fifty sleighs and cutters in the procession; if they had said fifty and left out the hundred diffy they had said fifty and left out the hundred they would have come much nearer to the truth; and also that there was over six hundred true and honest me said down to dinned. I am not wishing to question the honor and honests of the dinned. I am not wishing to question the honor and honesty of the guests, but but it is the numbers that astonish ma. What benefit can there be in making statements that are not correct. I can safely say that not half the number were present. As a subscriber to the Globe I place great confidence in the truth and correctness of the accounts found in its columns, but I cannot believe them, when I know them to be incorrect, and I fortunately happened to be complete rain and misery. Vengyander. nuence in the from and correctness of the despecially the otheres, contested believe then, when I know them to be incorrect, and I fortunately happened to be an eye witness to the demonstration, and is loudly called for, and Governor the statements. They however omit giving us an account of the manner they treated a great number of the well to do farmers and others, (the real bone and sinew of the country) as they laudably term them, who were not able to attend the dinner, and wished to hear some of the speeches from the talented gentlemen. But no, they could not obtain admittance, without paying the paltry fee of twelve and a half cents, bone and sinew as they were, and the most stern supporters. Thus were they treated; debarred from hearing their own member speak, after the unremitting exercitions ther had used to return him. By giving the above an insertion in your rall table paper you will greatly oblige, Yours, were not able to attend the dinner, and A RESIDENT AND LOVER OF TRUTH

-CAPTURE OF A RAILROAD THEF

From the Globe of Wednesday

tity of goeds of various descriptions have been stolen from the promises of the Grand Trank Railway Company, Queen's Wharf The police authorities have been informed from time to time of the rubheries, and although Detective Colgan has been busily engaged mak ing anquiries for several weeks, it was not til yesterday that he was rewarded for his trouble, by bringing to light a large quantity of stelen property. From certain circumstances which gistrate granted the warrant, and Coigni ac companied by Constable Junes of the Grand Trunk, visited Armstrong's house on Donot Sircet. When they entered the house on Board to colock yesterday, they found Armstrong is hed. They informed his wife that they had a warrant to search the premises them to search the premises the search that they had search the premises them to search the premises them to search the premises the search that they had search the search that they had search the search the search that they had search the search the search that they had search the search the search that they had search the search the search that they had search the search the search that they had searc ame to his knowledge Colgan was induced to was a detective, and that he had a warrant for that it was his intention to search the premises as he had reason to believe that there was : large quantity of stolen property concealed somewhere. Armstrong replied that he might mearch if he pleased, but that he knew nothing about stolen property. Colgan and Jones then went to work and made a complete overhaul of the premises, when they brought to light a quantity of stolen property sufficient to fill a large eart, and almost enough for the slock-intrade of a country general merchant. The roods found included firking of butter, chests of groups to the theorem of the state of the characteristics that the kegs of whiskey, oil caus, boxes of candy, boxes of starch, boxes of soap, boxes of candles boots and shoes, signal lamps. flannel, brushes, table cloths, oil cloths, toilet soap, buttons, and soner were brought to the City Hall Police about $50 per month as night foreman of the locomotive department.
