Once the mother sat beside it When the day was growing dim, And her pleasant voice was singing Soft and low, a cradle hymn Now there's no more need of singing When the evening shadows creep, For the cradio-bed is empty. And the baby gone to sleep.

Little head, that used to nostle In the pillows white and soft; Little hands, whose restless fingers Folded there in dreams so oft; Lips we pressed with fondest kisses Eyes we praised for purest rays,-

Underneath the church-vard daisies

They have hid you all away. Ah! the empty, useless cradle We will put it out of sight, Lest our hearts should grieve too sorely For the little one to-night.

We will think how safe forever. In the better world above,

That young lamb for which we sorrow, Resteth now in Jesus' love.

Misrellaneous,

One of our writere asks what sort of animals are the laziest? Oysters, of course they never get out of their bed till they are pulled out.

"Dick, you have got a hole in your trowsers." "Who cares, it will wear longer than a patch." "Yes," syes Sam, "and wider too."

The idle should not be classed among the living; they are a sort of dead men who can't be buried.

Keep doing, always doing. Wishing, dreaming, intending, murmuring, talking, sighing, and repining, are all idle and profitless employments.

What homes in after life is beloved like the walls that girt round the innocent days of our childhood?

Truth is a rock of strength sufficient to bear the universe; error, a mire in which bodies sink in proportion to their gravity.

Alas! the flame of friendship shines but in the nights of life, for the sun of prosperity overpowers its ray.

A poor drunken loafer was picked up in the street. There was no sense in his head, no cents in his pocket, a powerful sent in his breath, and he was sent to the Scotch Wit .- A little boy had lived for some time with a very penurious uncle, who took good care that the child's health should not be injured by over-feeding. The uncle was one day walking out, the child at his side, when a friend accosted him at ms side, when a friend accosted him accompanied by a greyhound. While the effers were talking, the little fellow, never having seen a dog of so slight and slim a texture, clasped the creature around the neck unimpassioned cry: "Oh, doggie! and dir ye live wi' your uncle, tae, that you're so thin!"

An Irishman in the course of a cussion touching the superior nature pro-ductions of various countries, said: "You may talk, "as ye plaze about it, but be Jabers, Scotland is the finest coun-

"How so?" cries one.
"Impossible!" exclaims another.

"Impossible!" exciains another.
"Give me your reason?" said a third.
"Why, gintlemen," said be, "don't ye see Scotland has a whole river of Tay runnin' through it."
