AULD LANGSYNE DONE UP IN TARTAN.

The following jen d'esprit was written by t minister of a small rural parish, near Perth, with reference to the Highland belief in the antiquity of the Gaetic tongue:—

Should Gaelic speech be e'er forgot, An' never brocht to min'. For she'll be spoke in Paradise In the days o' auld langsyne

When Eve, all fresh in beauty's charms, First met fond Adam's view, The first words that he'll spoke tilf her Was '' Cumar ashum dhu.''

And Adam, in his garden fair, Whenever the day did close, The dish that he'll to supper touk Was always Athole brose.

When Adam from his leafy bower Cam oct at break o' day, He'll always for his morning teuk A quaich o' usquebae.

An' when wi' Eve he'll had a crack, He'll teuk his sneeshin' horn, An' on the tap ye'll weel micht mark A ponny braw cairngorm,

The sneeshin' mull is fine, my frien's,
The sneeshin' mull is grand;
We'll teukit a hearty sneesh, my frien's,
An' pass't frae hand to hand.

When man first fand the want o' class, The wind an' cauld to fleg, He twisted round about his waist The tartan philabeg. An' music first on earth was heard

In Gaelic accents deep;
When Jubal in his exter squeezed
The blether o' a sheep.

The praw bagpipes is grand, my frien's.
The praw bagpipes is fine:
We'll teukit anither pibroch yet,
For the days o' auld langsyne.

Marry if you would prosper; a pair are always four handed—an individual never. Bullets can sing and whistle, but they are not pleasant musicians.

When the loved one is absent every beautiful thing seems her shadow.

Do the best you can where you are, and when that is done, you will see an opening for something better.

In the interchange of leaden and iron compliments between soldiers, it is thought more blessed to give than to receive.

It is vain to struggle against change and confusion. The whole world is turned upside down every twenty-four hours.

That wonderous book, whose leaves are the strata of the rocks, waited six thousand years for readers.

OUT-DOOR AMUSEMENTS.

The real meaning and the lasting charm of athletic sports is that they tend to bring out personal hardihood, endurance, and pluck; and a show of real pluck is immensely dear to the British heart. It is the pluck of Lord Palmerston that makes so strong an appeal to the people. They greet Earl Russell with a lustier cheer who remember the testimony of one of his friends, to the effect that he was plucky enough to say he would take command of the Char nel Fleet at an hour's notice. Th is really one of the feelings stirring in the bosom of a mob when it cheers or hisses under the gallows. The ough detest a coward under any circumstances, and would willingly hug a man who can die game ever on the scaffold. One of the mos nonular books written for years-'Tom Brown'—is so, because of its pluckiness, its out-of-door feeling, its neartiness, and robust English character. One of our manliest preachers of muscular Christianity, too, has been very appropriately called a disciple of Thomas Carlysle and Thomas Cribb. Indeed, of late years, we have been undergoing a reaction against the views of life and educaion that were for a time in the as People were too rapidly cendant. getting into the over-intellectual state of the child who asked her grandmother what she should think, and they quite as much needed the old lady's reply, 'My dear, don't think.' We were to live as though think.' mind was everything, and Bishop Berkeley's saying was accepted, and there was no matter. We were to listen in the lecture-room, study at home, and spend our lives betwixt book and bed. This sort of thing was getting us all into a state of maudlin sentimentality. Fortunately a tide of fresh health has set in, and we have our present army of rifle volunteers. We rejoice that this is so, and would help on the change in every possible way.

The life of the present day is so often lived at fever heat, it is so rapid and restless, as to produce a morbid nervous condition. The wear and tear is enormous. It is the wear and tear is enormous. It is the pace that kills. We need all the aid we can obtain from the country, all the 'healthy animalism' and phisique that are to be drawn from sport or play, to strengthen us in the struggle in social matters we support all those means and influences that help in their various ways to produce a healthy national life, so we claim all out-of door sports, pastimes, and ath-letic games as godsends of good. An old proverb tells us that the days spent in the chase are not reckoned in our length of life. Those who cannot enjoy the chase in search of health, or tramp the heather with the gun, we should like to see at the foot-race and wrestling match, in he cricket-field or gymnasium. And we wish the training of this national feeling to be in better hands than those of the prize-ring patrons. Bread and theatres was the cry of the Roman people. Ours is bread, education, and out-of-door recrea-Much of the healthiness and tions. physical beauty of the Greeks was owing to their baths and races. We would far rather hear of the thousands that attend the trial of strength. skill, pluck, and mettle, shown at a foot-race, than read of them crowding to see the performance of Blonlin. The one encourages a right admiration of sound manly qualities; the other feeds a morbid false excitement. In Blondin's case it is not only the exhibition of skill, but the suggestion of imminent danger, that thrills through the acres of nuslin and rustles along the leagues of silk below that bridge of life-anddeath, narrow as the one which leads into the Mohammedan Paridise. Lastly, we look upon the national sentiment hear treated of as one of the greatest sureties that our English race is not to sink down under the sorceries of sensuality, and de-
