THE ORPHAN'S GRIEF. It was summer-glorious summer; Other children were a playing. Gathering flowers or climbing hillsides. But the orphan's steps were straying Only to the lonely graveyard, Where she saw the willows weeping, And her beautiful beloved In the solitude were sleeping. What to her the flowers of summer, With the sunlight glancing o'er, Since her beautiful beloved Looked on flowers and sun no more? What to her the moonbeams dancing O'er the waters as in play, Since the full moon looked upon her, When her mother passed away ! Naught to her the sports of school-girls In the interim of moon, Since her father and her mother Went away from her so soon. Went so scon forever from her, That she could not join in play, And she wearied of the sunlight Round her ou a summer's day, O, up voice had music for her Like the words she used to hear And her heart grew faint within her With " a strange and nameloss fear ;" For no home smile waited for her When the tasks of school were o'er, But an orphan, without welcome, Entered she a stranger's door ! O, a deep and blighting serrow

GREAT FIRE IN NEWMARKET. Loss $27,000.

(From the Newmarket Era Extra) One of the most fearful fires this village has ever suffered, broke out on Saturday morning about half-past three o'clock, in a wooden tenement occupied by Mr. Dieterlie watchmaker. Soon the premises occupied by Mr. Henderson, grocer, were in a blaze, and then followed the tenea blize, and then followed the tene-ments occupied by Hr. John Wilson and Mr. B. Lee, shoemakers, and W. Lee, baker. While these were being devastated, attempts were made to pull down the premises oc-cupied by Mr. Wra. Walks, saddler, and Mr. Press also naker: but beand Mr. Prest, sho maker : but be fore they succeeded, the fire reach-ed the premises. The flones continued to spread, notwithstanding the desperate efforts made to check them, and soon communicated with the stean cabinet shop of Mr. Joseph Miliard. Meanwhile the Hook Company di-rected their efforts to pull down the building occupied by Mr. John Graham, toy and fancy shop; but the flames reached it before they succeeded. Here the fire was checked, so far as Main street was concerned,---not without the Com-mercial Block having taken fire in two or three places, but as many times extinguished. The tannery and other out-buildings in the real of the Wallis block were all burned, save an lexcept a small stable .-The filmes also went norm, and consumed the fine brick dwelling owned by Mr. John Davidson, and the buildings in the rear.
