And now another soul is gone To join the host above, And left the world of grief behind, To sing the song of lave,

A tender flower, just in the bud Of life was plucked away, Far from the chilling winds of earth To labor in endless day.

And now before the Eternal Throne To celebrate redeeming love, And sound the Saviour's praise, Cheered by this hope we can sustain This unexpected call, And calmly give our offspring up To Him who died for all.

In hope to most his happy soul When all life's cares are 6'er, And hall the blood-besprinkled land On that sterual shore

KEEP AWAY FROM MUSLIN.-Boys if you don't want to fall in love, keep away from muslin. You can no more play with rom musin. You can no more play with those girls without losing your hearts, than you can play with gamblers without losing your money. The heart strings of a woman like tendrils of a vine, are always reaching out for something to cling to. The consequence is, that before you are going you are 'gone' like a lot at an auc-

VENTUATE THE STAIRCASE .- Fey will deny that the passage and staircases are to use a similar, the lungs' of a house, which require good air and ventuation; both of which might be easily had by simply hanging the fan-lights over the outer ones, so as to open and shut; which to our thinking ought to be an imperative law. All would find how sweet and wholesome dwellings—before not so—are ren-dered by this cheap and easy expedient.—

THE BEAUTY OF YOUTH .- The most disagreeable period of human life is that sive as a courageous barking puppy. Yet in spite of all this, how beautiful and significant is youth.

Good Temperad Girls.—It we had our choice between a wife with ten thousand pounds and a bad temper, and one with sixpence and a sweet good temper, we should take the latter at once, or we rare a bigger fool than we suspect ourselves of being. We deliberately believe that ten thousand pounds are times could a different standard of worth has been set up. which is to measure a GOOD TEMPERAD GIRLS .- If we had not be make to procure as much happiness as a sweet tempered wife could yield.

And as much as men love money, the clothes he wears, of the grace with as a sweet tempered wife could yield.

And as much as men love money, the greater and best part of them will judge So, girls, cultivate a sweet temper as the best dowry you can bring a 'Fermed long ago, though made to day, I'm most employed when others sleep; What few would wish to give away. And none would ever wish to keep.'

LEGAL FACETLE.—The following in cident is of recent date, and the witness was a clergyman. Scene a crowded court; trial, an action on the warranty of a borse, called a horse cause; witness, a clergyman, who has sworn in his examination in chief that in his opinion the horse was sound.

Counsel. Well, you don't know anything about horses? You'se a parson you Witness. I have a good deal of know.

Witness. Yes, I dare say I do.
Counsel. Now, then, sir, tell the jury the difference between a horse and a cov.

Witness. Gentlemen, one great difference between those two animals is, that one has horns and the other has not—much the same difference, gentlemen, that exists between a bull and a bully (turning to the Counsel.1

I am surprised at you.—Of course the Coun-weakening the mind, impairing the mel sat down, the witness left the court morals, forfeiting friends, and super-dith the happiness of having completely inducing poverty, and beggary, and wiscomfitted the opposite side; and escaped the consummation of all an early and perhaps a rigid cross examination. an unhenered grave.

BUT HE IS A GENTLEMAN

Not long since we chanced to hear a short dialogue between a mo ther and a daughter who had just arrived at the uge of 'sweet sixteen,' on the propriety of associating with a certain individual who was not named, but whom the moth seemed anxious that her daughter should shun. From what we could learn from conversation, it seemed that the individual in question possessed a prepossessing interior— well dressed—was familiar and affa ble in his manners, and to keep up his head in what is generally termed good society' in consequence of his 'winning ways,' but who was never-theless a heartless depraved wretch —a der auchee, and a notorious gam-bler. It was after these qualities of the man had been portrayed by the the man had been portrayed by the anxious mother as a warning to her inexperienced daughter, that the heartless girl exclaimed, as though she had hit upon a reason that out-weighed all her mothers objections:

But he is a gentleman.' The words struck our mind forcibly, nor will the honest simplicity with which they were uttered be soon effaced, but he is a gentleman! What then? Why these cannot be vices—a CENTLEMAN Would not practice—a CENTLEMAN would not practice. tice anything which is not proper, is the conclusion to which the unsophisicated mind of this girl at once arrived. How much misery, how much disappointment, how much overwhelming sorrow and regret has this one short sentence caused in the world? How many heartless villians are there who move in the best circles, and whose characters are known to be infamous, who yet hold on their heads for no other reason than because they are gentlemen—that is to say, they possess the exterior of a gentleman, a connely per-son, affable manners, and a good suit of clothes! How few are there especially among the young, who look beyond these accomplishments in forming their estimate of character! Let a man be ever so corrapt, let his private character be what it may, if he possesses these little external accomplishments, it will not answer, under the present condition of society, to consure him, 'for he is a gentleman.' But let a female wander from the path of propriety—yes, let her even be suspected of questionable era when one is neither boy nor man—thal graceless self-conceited age so fecund of bird-nesting and erchard robbing; so brimful of 'pomatun' and 'old pistols.' When the sentiments were in it though she may be ever so charmpistols. When the sentiments were in limbo, and the rude energies and activities are impatient to the least restraint. When one is, in short, pragmatical as a learned pig: whistling and crowing from dawn till dark like a musical young clianticleer—and as continually on the aggression of the aggressi is it that men can practice with im-punity what will not be a moment tolerated in the other sex? That

Thus, it is not an uncommon thing to see a man who can drink, gamble swear, and commit any other Lord Stanhope in his lately published Life of Pitt, says that the subjoined enigmas are attributed to the celebrated Charles James Fox, and characterizes the first as 'perhaps the best and 'ruest enignaked deformity to the artless youtk there would be little danger to apprehend from them. But the cloud under which their baseness is disguised renders them doubly dangerous associates for youth, for it enables them sociates for youth, for it enables mem first to gain confidence by their easy address, then allure to ruin. Every parent who has the good of his off-spring at heart, should not hesitate to expose the vipers, nor let the consideration that 'he is a gentleman' have any weight in restraining him from the society and influence of such men. It may be an unpleasant task, but it is a duty which you owe to your children and to yourself, and will doubtless save you many a pang of anguish, and many a vain regret. -Literary Champion.
