

I do, therefore, hope that the Directors of the Agricultural Society of the Township of Vaughan may, at their convenience, take such steps as their practice skill and experience may suggest in this matter, and that the result of such deliberations might be given to the public as soon as possible.

I remain, Dear Sir,
Yours respectfully
REUBEN LEE,
Thamesville, 5th Con. Vaughan,
Sept. 1st, 1865.

We heartily concur with the views of our correspondent, as to the desirability of making some endeavor to reconcile the discordant views and interests, connected with the important question referred to.

The suggestion with respect to Maple seems to us sound policy, and the alternation of fairs, a matter of simple justice. Could not the coming exhibition be made a union one between the Yonge Street and Vaughan Societies? We apprehend that thus the interests of both the Societies, and the cause they represent, would be effectually subserved.—Ed.]

Shocking Fratricide in West Nissouri.

THE MURDERER ARRESTED.

LONDON, Sept. 4, 1865.
It is our painful duty this morning to record the particulars of a most brutal and savage murder, perpetrated in the township of Nissouri West on Saturday night last, the result, apparently of an old and bitter family feud.

The details, as far as we have been able to glean them, are as follows:—Two brothers, named John and Samuel McDowell, together with their sister Eliza, came to London on Saturday to dispose of some produce, and make some purchases, and on their return home the men became intoxicated. John's wife was away picking hops when her husband and his brother returned, and when she came back they were engaged in a quarrel in front of the shanty. They appeared to be very angry, and his words were passing between them. John's wife let down the fence to get the cattle into the yard, when he interfered, telling her it was no affair of hers to let the cows in. She did so, however, and then following Samuel into the shanty, gave him his supper, and began to chat with him. Just then her husband rushed in and angrily demanded why she had let the cows in at that time of the night. Some hard words passed, and John struck his wife on the head with his clenched fist. This was what Samuel had anticipated, and to prevent which he had come that night to his brother's house. At the sight of the stroke he entirely gave way to his passion, and rose hastily from the supper table and bounded with terrible ferocity upon his brother. With a heavy blow of his fist he sent him reeling to the floor, then fell upon him, and getting him jammed up behind the door, began to choke him by grasping him with his fingers at the throat. True to Samuel's habit, Mrs. McDowell interfered to save her husband, begging Samuel in piteous accents to desist from violence towards him, offering to suffer any tortures he might inflict upon her rather than see him hurt. Samuel then allowed his brother to get up, and the latter had no sooner regained his feet than he called for the axe. Samuel got it for him, and seizing it with the ferocity of a maniac, buried it over his head and threatened to chop down any one who would molest him. But watching his opportunity, Samuel again seized his wife and forced her to the floor, and during the scuffle Mrs. McDowell recovered the axe and hid it away. Samuel then ran into a field and stripped of his waist, he dared John to come and meet him in fair and open fight. John again demanded the axe from his wife, but she stated that she did not know where it was. In a minute more the horrible tragedy was enacted. Seizing a stick which had been used to stir the fire, John rushed to meet his brother in deadly conflict. He made one bound to clear the fence and to get at his brother, but tripped and fell upon the ground. Samuel bounded upon him in an instant, and with great strength wrenched the iron weapon from his grasp, and as he lay partly stunned by the fall and nearly mad with rage by the injuries already received, Samuel lifted the stick and struck him with all his might three heavy blows upon the head. At the second blow John's wife ran up, and threw herself between the two men, and implored Samuel, in the name of God, to spare her husband. The wife lifted him up gently, and seeing, by the moon's bright rays, his upturned eyes and ghastly countenance, and feeling that his pulse had ceased to throb, turned upon Samuel McDowell and charged him with killing her husband. The death of his brother did not appear to disturb him much. He lay out in the bush all night, like a hunted felon, every moment expecting the officers of justice upon his track, and the fear of detection, instead of driving him to elude pursuit, seemed to paralyze his energies.

On Sunday afternoon an inquest was held on the body of the murdered man by Coroner Flock, when all who had any knowledge of the circumstances were thoroughly examined touching the matter. Dr. Moore, of London, made a post mortem examination of the body, and said that deceased had sustained a great many hurts and bruises in all parts of his body. The heaviest blow he stated, were inflicted on the mouth and nose. The skull was not fractured, but death resulted from concussion, which produced a rupture of the blood vessels of the brain.

A Female Borgia—She Destroys Six Lives by Poison.

The New York World publishes the following:—"Hamilton, August 30, last week a woman named Perkin, wife of a respectable farmer, near Brantford, U. C., finding herself upon her deathbed, sent for a clergyman and confessed that she had at different periods of her life committed six murders, and all by poison! At first it was imagined that she was delirious, but subsequent inquiry has afforded ample corroboration of the poor wretch's statement. She said that she had a mania for destroying human life, and it was only by the greatest self-restraint that she could keep herself from secretly poisoning all persons with whom she was on terms of friendship. She had, however, poisoned four children and two adults, and what makes the matter still more revolting is the fact that two of the former were her own children, and one of the latter her first husband's. The children were murdered in England, and the adults in Canada. She has been married to her second husband for a number of years, and all the time passed for a very respectable industrious woman. Her appearance, however, was in most respects repulsive, and she was, in fact, the exact image of what we should imagine one of the weird sisters in "Macbeth" to have been. She died soon after making the above horrible disclosure."

CORNY COURT.—The sitting of the County Court for the united counties of York and Peel, in and for the county of the city of Toronto, commenced on Tuesday, the 5th inst., at 12 o'clock, before the Hon. S. B. Harrison. The docket was very small, containing only ten cases undefended, and these were cases disposed of in an hour. The sittings of this court for the united counties together with the Court of Quarter Sessions, will commence on Tuesday next, at 12 o'clock. Parties interested in appeal cases would do well to be in attendance at the opening of the court on the first day, to prove their notices, as there exists a rule of the court to that effect.

On Saturday Mr. Devlin of Montreal, made application to M. J. Justice Beithot for a writ of Habeas Corpus to admit Wayne W. Blossom, one of the Saunders' kidnapers, to bail. The writ was ordered to issue, returnable on Monday; but we (Montreal Gazette) understand that the admission of the prisoner to bail will be resisted on the part of the Crown.

Suit.—A gentleman at a ladies' fair, lately being solicited to buy something by a fair creature who kept a table, said he wanted what was not for sale—a lock of hair. She promptly out of the coveted curl and received the sum asked for it—one hundred dollars. The purchaser was showing his teeth to a friend. "She rather had you," said the friend; "to my certain knowledge, she only paid eight dollars for the whole wig."

MACBYS Air-Tight and Frost-Proof Door!

PATENTED JUNE 16, 1865.

REFERENCES:
Richmond Hill, July 20th, 1865.
Mr. Wm. C. Mackay.

Sir.—Your Air-tight Door seems likely to meet with liberal favor from the public.
We require something of the kind to render our outside doors proof against air and frost—this invention will doubtless meet the case, and will be found both cheap and efficient. It commands itself to the judgment of those who investigate the matter, as being calculated to save fuel, and to render a family residence more healthy and attractive.

Having adopted the principle in my residence, we have thereby the best evidence, that I consider your patent worthy the attention of the public.

Yours truly
ANGUS WRIGHT, M.P.P.
RICHMOND HILL, July 1st, 1865.

Mr. Wm. Mackay.
Sir.—Having tried your "Patent Air-tight and Frost-proof Door," I have reason to believe that it is an excellent contrivance, and calculated to contribute much to the comfort of those who adopt it. I am of opinion that much less wood will be required to heat a house in the winter season if your patent is applied to the outside doors of a residence.

M. TEEFY, Postmaster,
RICHMOND HILL, July 4, 1865.

Mr. Wm. Mackay.
Sir.—I have examined your model of newly invented door, and consider it superior to any thing I have seen for stopping draughts and frost, and think it will greatly save fuel, save health and prevent damage from frost. It is likewise cheap.

Yours, &c.,
JAMES LANGSTAFF, M. D.
