Poetry. SWEET SOUNDS.

Oh! had I some old magician's power, All the sweet sounds of earth and air I'd call together in eve's calm hour, And bid them commingle in concord rare.

Literature. Old Barnett's Legacy.

Continued from our last. 'Dear, bless me!' exclaimed Miss Greystock with hands uplifted. 'What will become of me, if he escapes?'

him under any condition, and that if he molest you, you will put yourself under the protection of the police.

'And then he'll get the whole of the money.' 'He'll get nothing, madam; don't trouble about that. Long before a year is out, he'll either be dead of delirium tremens, or else in prison for another thing of this kind, and next time he won't get off so easy.

Literature. Old Barnett's Legacy.

Timothy pleaded 'Not guilty' at the trial; and the lawyer, who resented his rejection of their aid as an insult to the profession, were inclined to be very hard upon him, and evidently did not mean to let him off if they could help it.

tions of Mr. Barnett's will, and the fact that Timothy loving an honest girl, who loved him in return, would not have given her up for a duke's daughter with half a kingdom for a dowry.

'But, when ever this failed,' added Mr. Boniton, 'we were put up to our wit's end.' 'And so the prisoner elected to kill Mark Finchley, thinking that such an act would effectually scare Miss Greystock out of any desire to become his wife?'

Literature. Old Barnett's Legacy.

'You affirm that you settled every detail of the crime, and watched over its accomplishment. Were you actually present when it took place?'

'Mark Finchley, and it please your honour, answered the man, tugging at his grizzled forelock by way of salutation.

'You are the man who was reported to have been killed by Timothy Drake on the night of the 4th of July?'

Literature. Old Barnett's Legacy.

'Well, didn't show myself out of doors, and took care not to peep out of the windows; and as they looked for me everywhere but in my own house, even at the bottom of the river, your honour, there wasn't much fear of my being found out.'

WHITE LIES.—Some slipshod moralists insist that it is permissible and, indeed, commendable to tell fibs in cases where the utterance of the plain truth might give offence or pain.

AN INDIAN'S DEATH.—Some visitors to the Falls of Niagara found an Indian standing on the rock above the cataract. At a little distance was a projecting point of land, between which and the spot where the savage stood, rapids were sweeping with a smooth, but swift, current.

I like a little beer now and then, and when the teetotalists inform us, as they frequently do, that it is vile stuff, and that even the swine shrink from it I say it only shows that the swine is an ass who don't know what's good; but to pour gin and brandy down one's throat is freely as though it were fresh milk, is the most idiotic way of going to the devil I know of.—Astoria Ward
