GOLD AND SILVER LEAF.

Some years ago, when I commenced business, I was very particular to have all Goods guaranteed before purchasing (I still continue the practice, finding it necessary), but though useful, still it did not answer every purpose, for customers will seldom return articles which prove unsatisfactory, but will go elsewhere.

I then tested all Drugs and Dye-Stuffs, selling only such as were proved to be good, and my business increased very rapidly in consequence; but Paints, Oils and Varnishes gave me trouble occasionally, as I required a practical painter to test them. I have now employed a practical Painter of fifteen years' experience, who tests all in that line before they are offered for sale; so now I can safely say that every article will be as represented.

While I sell at as low a figure as my competitors, I do not pretend to undersell all and sundry; yet I not only pretend to keep, but do and will keep, the best Goods that can be procured, and will sell them at the lowest remunerative price for Cash.

I have adopted this course, and find that it pays, as it retains the most respectable and steady class of customers.
