A VOICE FROM THE PENITENTIARY

The following beautiful lines were found pencilled by a convict, in one of the books belonging to the library of the Provincial Penitentiary.—Kingston Herald.

MOTHER. I've wandered far away, mother,

Far from my happy home,
And left the land that gave me birth, In other climes to roam: And time since then has rolled his years, And marked them on my brow,

Yet still I think of thee, mother-I'm thinking of thee now. When by thy gentle side, mother.
You watched my dawning youth,
And kissed me in your pride, mother,
Taught me the word of truth;

Then brightly was my soul lit up
With thoughts of future joy,
Whilst you bright fancy garlands wove,
To deck thy darling boy.

I'm thinking on the day, mother, When, with such anxious care You lifted up your heart to heaven, Your hope, your trust was there, Fond memory brings the parting glance

Whilst tears roll down my cheek; That last, long, loving look, told more Than ever words could speak.

I'm lonely and forsaken, mother, No friend is near me now, To sooth me with a tender word Or cool my burning brow, The dearest ties affection wove Are all now torn from me:

They left me when my troubles came, They did not love like thee. I would not have thee know, mother, How brightest hopes decay—
The tempter, with his baneful cup,
Has dashed them all away;

And shame has left its venom sting, To rack with anguish wild, Yet still I would not have thee know The sorrows of thy child.

I've wandered far away, mother, Since I deserted thee, And left thy trusting heart to break Beyond the deep blue sea; Yet, mother, I still love thee well,

I long to hear thee sneak. And feel again thy balmy breath, Upon my careworn cheek. But ah! there is a thought, mother,

Pervades my beating breast, That thy freed spirit may have flown To its eternal rest! And as I wipe the tear away, There whispers in my ear, A soice that speaks of heaven, mother,

And bids me seek thee there!

Two VALUABLE LEGS .- Spain seems to depend at the present moment on the destiny of two particular legs—one, that of General Cabrera, the other, that of El Tato. The chances of the Carlist outbreak depend to a great extent on the recovery of General Cabrera, who is forced to keep his bed on account of a serious operation performed on the veteran soldier's—leg. If the political world is thus affected by the ill health of one leg, the social world is profoundly agitated by the loss of another. This time it is a leg which has been much observed and admired by all the merry-makers of Madrid. Indeed, it is a leg known all over Spain-that of the bull-fighter El Tato. On the day of the promulgation of the Constitution, El Tato was struck by a bull's horn, and since then his leg has been amputated. There ensued a mighty question—What should be done with the precious leg? Should it be embalmed or pickled? In any case, it was clear that it must be conserved as a sacred relic of Spain's glory. The chemist won the day; he was intrusted with the duty of embalming this wonderful limb. For a moment Spain relapsed into a state of quietude. But, with a crash louder than thunder, some chemical stuff caught fire the other day, the chemist's shop was blown up into the air, and in the explosion has vanished—no one knows whither—the sacred leg.—Daily News,
