The Printer's Hour of Peace

Know ye the Printer's hour of peace? Know ye an hour more traught with j Than ever filled the maid of Greece,

When kissed by Venus' amorous boy? 'Tis not when round the mazy case, His nimble fingers kiss the types, Nor is it when with lengthened face, The sturdy devil's tail he gripes.

'Tis not when news of dreadful note His columns all with minion fill: 'Tis not when brother Printer's quote The effusions of his stamp-worn quills 'Tis not when in Miss Fancy's glass

Long advertisements greet his eye, And seem to whisper as they pass "We'll grace your columns by and by." No, reader, no! the Printer's hour, His home of real sweet repose, Is not when by some magic power,

But oh! 'tis when the weather, clear, Or clad in rain, in hail, or vapor, He hears, in accents sort and dearor the paper.' "I've come to pay you

Singers and Singing

The character of the voice depends greatly on the physical organization. It is modified by the size and shape of the mouth, as well as the manner of using it: If a woman's mouth be small, and her lungs weak, her singing voice will sound like cooing, if her mouth be small and her lungs powerful, her voice will resemble hooting, making a hollow sound like that produced by blowing into the narrow neck of a large bottle, if her "angels ever bright and fair," compared a negress, and approach a masculine tenor. It may not have been generally observed that, in proportion as any race of mankind is cultivated and civilized. the difference in the physical power of the two sexes is widened. The male and female of the African race are more nearly equal in bodily strength than the white man and woman. I have heard a negro man and woman singing together, and as I did not see them, I could not determine whether the duet was performed by two of the same sex or otherwise. The voice of a negro of either sex, however, has in all eases, a twang peculiar to that race. It might be imitated by singthrough a widely flaring tin funnel. The length and size of the neck produces important modifications of the voice. Soprano singers, for the most part, have short necks and high shoulders. Women with very long necks and sloping shoulders have contr-alto voices almost without exception. Hence we may explain a fact which often excites surprise-that many tall and slender women have a low and deep-toned voice, which should be dis-
