Franco-Prussian War.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16 .- The Herald's correspondent, writing from the headquarters of the second army of the Loire, at Le Mans, at midnight, on the 11th inst., gives the following particulars of the second btatle between Cauzy's forces and the German army under Prince Frederick Charles. He

It was replied to with at Paris, with an army to the relief of that spirit, and very soon a large force of Ger man infantry, flanked by cavalry, advanced under cover of a heavy artillery fire, striking the right of Admiral Jaurequiberry's posi tion. The assaulting column was met by a fierce artillery fire from many guns, including a number of mitrailleuses of new pat tern. The struggle now became exceedingly severe, and was well contested ; but although the Germans suffered heavy loss, they finally succeeded in driving back the French, cap turing early two guns and holding the important position near the river. General Chauzy perceiving the danger which threatened his position, moved his reserve of artillery to the support of Jaurequiberr. and then opened a terrific fire which checked for a while the further advance of the Ger mans in that direction. Two or three severe assaults were made by the Germans to secure further advantages, the object being to take the position held by the French at La Tillere. The French, however, were strongly posted and fought with great courage and deter mination. Each assault was repulsed with serious loss to the Germans, the French also losing heavily. Meantime an equally fierce attack was made on the French line covering the railroads to Chartres and Paris. After two hours' desperate fighting the French centre was driven back. It retreated, how-ever, slowly and in good order, for a short distance only, to a position in the rear of that first occupied, where the rising ground | See of St. Peter. Hence it is proposed to afforded good facilities for the artillery. Here a heavy force of guns was parked which, manned by the marines, opened a severe and well directed fire upon the advancing enemy. This not only checked the Germans, but compelled them to fall back on the town. A heavy counter fire soon opened from the German batteries, which

After an unequal duel the French fire slackened, the Germans causing great loss to the French lines. Still the French infantry maintained, their position heroically, and another attempt to dislodge them signally failed. The contest for the possession of Britte was kept up here until dark, when an order reached the French to fall back on Le Mans. The battle com-menced about one o'clock and reached its height on the left of the French. The day was not cold, but the ground was covered with eight inches of snow, which was fast melting under the hot sun. At an early hour the streets of Le Mans, not more than five miles from the field of battle, were filled with excited people and crowded with waggons and ammunition, the supplies all being ready to seek a place of safety in the rear in following result : case of an unfavourable result of the fight. By noon I succeeded in securing a post at the front and reaching the bluffs at the east TORONTO of Le Mans. The French left wing passed out on the road with ammunition trains and artillery, apparently going backward and forward in what appeared to be disorder. Numerous groups of stragglers and some wounded were going to the rear. Ambu lances passed to and fro, some going to the front and others retarning with loads of wounded. Along the railroad every available point was commanded by a strong force of infantry. The Prussians were less than a boro'. mile away and their balls occasionally reached us. Here, for the first time, a French battery, hitherto reserved, opened fire, and appeared to take the Ger mans by surprise. This caused the advance to waver, but it was for only a moment. The Germans pressed forward and attacked the French infantry, which occupied the £120,000. On the banks of the Vaal river have all the knowledge possible concern-terraced road below Gen.
