On one of the recent excursions for poor New York children, a little pale faced hat less boy was noticed, who carried his ticket tightly clasped in his hand all day. He found in the grove a small fruit basket, which he quietly filled with earth, and then planted in it one of the wild weeds which here abounded. Many times during the day he carried his little basket to the spring, and filling his hard with water, dashed it upon the plant. He did so, and the man calling himself Fisher said that he wished to engage Mr. Muller's services as teacher. The two men then started for Fisher's house, which the latter said was in St Mark's Place. When opposite No 65 St Mark's Place an unknown man sprang upon them from the stoop and ired a pistol at Muller. The bullet missed its mark, and the assailant thereupon attacked Muller with the butt-end of his weapon cutting his tace badly and knocking out two of his teeth. He and Fisher then fled.
