There is no Death.

BY LORD LYTTON.

There is no death! The stars go down Torlse upon some farer sho e, And bright in heaven's jeweled crown They shine forever more.

There is no death! The dust we tread Shall change beneath the summer sh ers To golden grain or mellowed fruit, Or rainbow-tinted flowers.

The granite rocks disorganize, And feed the hungry moss they bear; The forest leaves drink daily life From out the viewless air.

There is no death! The leaves may fall,
And flowers may fade and pass away—
They only wait through wintry hours
The coming of May day,

There is no death! An angel form Walks o'er the earth with stent tread, And nears our best loved things away, And then we call call them "dead!"

He leaves our hearts all desolate He pucks our fairest, sweetest flowers; ransplanted into bliss they now Adorn immortal bowers. The birdlike voice, whose joyous iones Made glad these scenes of sin and strife, Sings now an everlasting song Around the tree of life.

Where'er he sees a smile too bright, Or heart too pure for taint and vice, He bears to to the world of light To awell in paradise.

Born to that undying life, They leave us but to come again; With joy we welcomed them the same, Except their sin and pain.

And ever near us, though unseen, The dear, immortal spirits tread; For all the boundless universe Is life-there is no death!

Our Exports of Dairy Produce. The increase which has taken place in our exports of dairy produce during the last few years has been marked and striking. In no other department of agriculture has there been such a rapid expansion—a fact for which we are largely indebted to the numerous choese factors, and the result flowing therefrom, which have been established in almost every part of the county. Up to a late a period as 1864-5, we were large importers of cheese. In 1861 we imported 2,152,000 lbs, and in the year 1864-5, just alluded to, our importations were 2,530,950 lbs. The great change which has since taken place will at once be seen by placing ide by side our exports and imports of cheese during the last two years : YEAR. IMPORTS, EXPORTS, 1868-7 50,401 lbs, 3,827,781 lbs, 1970-71 69,175 lbs, 8,271,89 lbs, These figures indicate a complete revolution in this branch of our trade, and we are happy to perceive that, in the kindred article of cutter, there has been a large increase in the amount of our shipments to other countries. Our importations of butter may be said to be nil, for they have dwindled down to from ten thousand to six thousand to ounds annually, a quantity so trifling as the Czar, sensibly a country of the country of the

The C

My Last trame of Base Ball.

The Keward of Merit. Czar Ivan, who reigned over Russia about the middle of the sixteenth century, frequently went out disguised, in order to discover the opinion which the people entertained of his administration. One day, in a solitary walk near Moscow, he entered a small village; and, pretending to be over-come by fatigue, he implored relief from come by fatigue, he implored relief from several of the inhabitants. His dress was ragged; his appearance mean; and what ought to have excited the villagers, and ensured his reception, was productive of re-Full of indignation at such inhuman treatment, he was just going to leave the place, when he perceived another habitation, to which he had not as yet applied for aid. It was the poorest cottage in the village. The emperor hastened to it, and knocked at the door; a peasant opened it, and asked him what he wanted.

"I am almost dying with fatigue and hun-ger," answered the Czar; "can you give me a lodging for the night?" "Alas!" said the peasant taking him by the hand, "you will have but poor fare; you come at an unlucky time. My wife is about to become a mother; but come in. You will at least be sheltered from the cold; and such as we have you are welcome to. The peasant then made the Czar enter little room full of children. In a cradle were two infants al eping soundly; a girl three years old was sleeping on a rug near the cradle; while her two sisters, the one five and the other seven years old, were crying and praying to heaven for their mother, who was in a room adjoining.

"Stay here," said the peasant to the Czar.

"And is that all you wish, my friend, to make you happy? "Happy? judge for yourself; I have five fine children, a dear wife that loves me, a mother and father both in health, and my labor is sufficient to support them all."
"Do your father and mother live with you?"

Yes; they are in the next room with my wife." "But your cottage here is so very small."

"It is large enough; it can hold us all."
The peasant then went to his wife, who after an hour was happily past a l danger. Her husband, in a transport of joy brought ing of the danger beforeme, when the abanthe new-born child to the Czar.

A man to play base ball well must have an eye like a hawk, a foot as quick as a deer, and a pair of hands capable of grasping a cannon ball impelled by the force of a good charge of powder. Having force of a good charge of powder. Having none of these requisites, and being—not to put too fine a point on it—rather fat, it seems almost ridiculous for me to talk about my base ball days.

I never realized more fully than I did last vent that this is a world of grief, upon the day when our club, being rhort-handed, put me in to play 'third base.' I used to know something about the game, and, as I took my semithing about the game, and, as I took my station, I calculated to show these fellows how to do the trick. Strawberry Hill, with all its gim-cracks, its pasteboard battlements, and stained-paper carvings, was the lineal ancestor of the new law courts. The restorers of churches, the manufacturers of stained glass, the modern decorators and architects of all vanimodern decorators and architects of all vanities—perhaps, we may venture to add, the littualists and the High Church party—should think of him with kindness. It cannot be said that they should give him a place in their calender, for he was not of the stuff of which saints are made. It was very thin veneering of mediavalism which covered his modern creed; and the mixture is not particulary calefying. Still he found out that charming plaything which, in other ledention:

Mysterious Fatality. THE SINGULAR DEATH OF FOUR CHILDREN.

[From the St. Louis Times, July 20.]

coincidences, if nothing more, Last April, Martia was employed as a nurse girl in the family of a but her named Kohler, living on the Manchester road. She had charge of the children, a little boy three or four years old and a baby. One day the mother came home after a temporary absence and found the youngest child dead. It had been left alone with the girl and, although troubled with some childish ailment, was not thought to be really sick. A physician was called in who heard the statements of the girl, and pronounced the cause inflammation of some vital part.

One afternoon, several days after the death of the baby, the mother came into the house where she had left the girl alone with the little boy, and missing the latter made inquiry for him. He was a bright, adventur-ous youngster, and the unwonted silence made the mother anxious. In reply to tue little boy a corpse. An inquest was held and a verdict of death from concussion of the brain was returned. Nothing was found to implicate the girl, directly or indirectly, but inasmuch as there was nothing left for her

Several weeks later a sister of the girl, about four years old, died very suddenly and under very peculiar circumstances. The mother went away from home, leaving the little girl in Mattha's care, and when she returned was met with the announcement that the child was dead. The cause of the last death was declared to be heart disease.
